MILLINERY. OPENINGS

LEADING STYLES IN LADIES' HATS.

Fine Showing at Millinery Opening at Doxsee & Co's Store.

Small hats popular. Women of taste interested in the fashions which will prevail during the approaching fall and winter were attracted in crowds to Doxsee & Co's store on Friday and Saturday last. Speaking generally, they found that hats were small and fitted close to the head, and that the favorite combination of colors was black and white, black and blue, taupe and blue, mahogany and black. For instance there were small hats of velvet and plush adorned merely with a handsome aigrette placed upright near the back. A beautiful set which attracted much attention was composed of a hat and neck-piece. The hat was a little straight brim covered on top with panne velvet in white and faced in black. Trimming consisted of plaitings of black tulle and band of fur, while the neck-piece was of tulle set off with a band of fur. On some of the hats were handsome feathers. On the whole however the designs were marked by simplicity and grace.

MADILL'S FALL OPENING.

On Friday evening last all the beauty of our town was abroad in its streets visiting the displays exhibited in the various stores. Of all the displays Madill's are surely to be complimented. Such perfect taste without ostentation, such variety and un-failing courtesy. It was with real pleasure that that the constant stream of fair visitors wandered at leisure through the store. From the outside the window display was perfect. Just enough to produce the best effect. The fabrics so beautifully draped and arranged were lovely indeed. Within the same perfection presented itself. The evening fabrics were beautiful; soft silks and satins in exquisite shades, chiffons and ninons as fluffy and delicate as summer breezes, rich brocaded velvets and silks, in short everything that is new and beautiful. Their dress trimmings are gorgeous and so varied. Beautiful Bulgarian effects, exquisite bandings and edgings, shadow laces, chic dress accessories of every description. All even the crowd hovered about the staple section admiring the exquisite linens displayed to such good advantage. They were certainly beautiful and expressions of admiration overheard led the scribe to believe that the linens were dear to the feminine heart. Handsome curtain materials were draped in lavish profusion, dainty Bungalow nets, all styles of window hangings were displayed.

It was a pleasure to visit the Ready-to-wear department. The garments

there on view are certainly to be praised. One lovely coat in black and the new cut away style called much praise. There were so chic little gowns in silk, set in white, and lovely indeed in suits in different styles and in calling forth many complimentary expressions. Beautiful beyond description was the display of the carpet section. Housefurnishings are ever dear to the feminine and the handsome rugs in and other styles called forth admiration for their variety, and high quality.

FASHION SHOW AND MILLINERY OPENINGS AT ROBINSO

As announced the Robins held their fashion show and opening last Friday. For the exhibition the store was reop 7.30. In the interval between opening time all the aisle tab removed and the floor was covered with plain green Wilton carpeting two aisles on which were a generous showing of fast fabrics for fall and winter wear. Among the new material many extremely pretty brocaded, bordered and plain some of them shown over brocaded silk or satin to match contrasting shades.

Buckles, banding, fringes, and trimmings of all sorts were much in evidence, many of them of Rhinestone, bead or metal.

Rich brocaded velvets, cut and plushes were shown in many new shades. These make an exceptionally handsome gown either used in combinations with cloth velvets or silks.

Novelties in neckwear, handkerchiefs and toilet articles were tastefully played in the handsome show the main store.

Silk, wool, cashmere and hosiery and gloves in new winter shades; Maribou fur neck pieces and muffs were shown in white, natural, brown, grey and black.

In the centre store the display of linens (Old Bleach) would have credit to a large city department store.

The millinery department with the most beautiful models one could imagine and the style all wearable. Everyone looked on to think it would not be in season to get a hat that would coming and good style. The shades were on the darkest such as Russian green, corbeau brown, purple, deep peacock and old blue. The shapes are and medium. Many smart hats have the soft tam crowns, velvet, plush and beaver hats are the most popular with trimmings, ribbons, ostrich, wings, and bandeaus. The children's hats very "chic".

Upstairs the fixtures were in one end of the store and a group of the seasons best clothes were shown to advantage on wax figures. Furs, too, attracted much attention from the

Over $25,000 has been spent by the Provincial Board of Health in conducting the sanitary survey of lake waters during the past summer, which is now nearing completion, involved investi- gating boundary waters at a score of points between Kingston on the east and Fort Francis on the west. Between 17,000 and 18,000 tests have been made, and while the results have not been tabulated it is understood that positive evidence of the board's contention that there was pollution from sewage deposited into the great lakes from large cities along the border has been established. Deceased was born in Odessa, being the son of Andrew Wiseman. He went over to the states when about twenty years of age. He was a widower, his wife and child having died several years ago. The remains will be interred at Syracuse. In addition to Sister Wiseman, there are two other members of the family surviving, Mrs. Archibald McCabe, Napanee, and Mrs. Robert Bennett, of Odessa. The latter and a niece of the deceased, Mrs. Wm. Dogherty, of Kingston, have left to attend the funeral.—Kingston Whig.

PURITY and QUALITY

These two essentials explain the great increase in demand for our bread since the installation of our new electrical bread mixer.

We have now a thoroughly up-to-date and sanitary bread plant, including bread mixer, sanitary steel troughs, etc. As a result we are able to place before the public a pure, clean wholesome, smooth-grained loaf of bread.

We ask all housewives who desire purity and quality in their bread to try a loaf of this bread and be convinced of its superiority.

TORONTO, Sept. 23.—Anxious concerning the safety of the Huron the Northern Navigation Co. was fully dispelled by the arrival of the big steamer at the Canada about 10 o'clock last night. Playfair of Toronto, president of the company, was in communication with the Soo late last night and informed that the Huronic arrived safely undamaged, despite the buffeting which forced her to shelter in Jackfish Bay during day's heavy snowstorm.

The fact that the steamer's whereabouts could not be ascertained late yesterday afternoon caused apprehension, particularly as the Huronic was equipped with wireless. The steamer Tionesta of the Line got into wireless communication with the Huronic in Lake Superior Saturday afternoon, but the message ended abruptly, and it was not until late yesterday that a message was received by local officials that the steamer had found a safe haven in Jackfish Bay. Later advice that the Huronic had resumed its voyage from Port Arthur to the Soo.

Senators Reed of Missouri and Bristow of Kansas, and Wee Massachusetts, declared emphatically against any attempt to limit consideration of the bill.

BAD FAITH CHARGED.

Grain Growers' Guide Says C. M. A. Is "Bluffing."

WINNIPEG, Sept. 23.—In dealing with the reply of the C.M.A. on the subject of lower duties on British imports, The Grain Growers' Guide says to-day that the idea of the manufacturers in urging a conference is not sincere and is only intended to secure delay. The article concludes a follows:

"The suggestion of the manufacturers for a conference with the grain
owers is a bluff pure and simple.
We should be more than glad to see the leading officers of the organized farmers hold a public conference with the manufacturers' officials, where each side will present their case, and we will venture to predict that the result will be that the manufacturers
would not have a single argument upon which to base their demand for protection.

"If the manufacturers really desire
a conference they might have shown the good faith by suggesting that at least some reduction could be made in the tariff on British imports. As it stands now, the manufacturers are relying upon their financial resources to hold both political parties in check and prevent them from making any radical reduction of the tariff. In the past the manufacturers have done
all their bargaining with the politicians; henceforth they will find that they have to reckon with the common people. It is now a struggle to see whether the manufacturers' dollars are more influential than the ballots
of the common people."

Correspondent of Liverpool Paper
Makes Announcement on High Authority That Pressure of Outside Events Has Forced Cabinet to Seek Popular Support—Conference Has Failed.

LONDON, Sept. 23.—If the information of a special Parliamentary correspondent of The Liverpool Courier is correct, the Government has recognized the advisability of securing the judgment of the electors on the Irish question. The correspondent is unable to say what precise form the appeal to the electors will take, whether by way of a general election or by a referendum, but he asserts he is now absolutely assured that the country will be consulted before home rule receives royal assent.

This announcement is said to be on first hand personal authority of a very eminent politician who has full and intimate knowledge of all the facts thereof. This important decision, it is stated, has been brought about by the pressure of outside events, strongly reinforced by very high and powerful influences, backed by an overwhelming sense of public opinion.

According to the correspondent it is quite certain there will be no formal conference of the kind now being discussed, and that the referendum has now become a necessity to the country, "and in all constitutional, if not in all a legitimate measure, a general referendum there must be, and a general referendum there will be."

Aviator Describes His Amazing Feats
In the Air.

PARIS, Sept. 23.—Aviator Pegard describes in Le Matin his latest feats in the air, which, he declares, are all
"quite easy." The object of his evolutions is to work out Bleriot's theory of the "air lifeboat," and his experiments show what an airman should do to save himself in the event of his machine being turned over by a gust of wind. He even asserts it is impossible to capsize an aeroplane of deliberate purpose by pivoting it on its wing, because the machine is too stable.

"If, however, some fearful gust of wind should thus turn the aeroplane
over, the pilot could regain normal
his position by pivoting on the wing.
I proved this three times by flying downwards, with the machine on its side and righted each time, both on right and left wing. Downward falls with the wings perpendicular to earth,
whether the engine is running or not,
are no longer dangerous. I tried with the whole series of such falls by warping the wing to its fullest extent, without using the rudder. The way in which the machine righted itself merely by a movement in the reverse direction, was simply amazing.

"For my falls of 500 feet, tail downwards, I pointed the nose of the aeroplane upwards by pulling the steering tiller right back and let her rip. The way I tried to capsize the machine sideways was by warping the wing to the fullest extent in the very act of banking steeply. If I want to capsize, to the ordinary way, I simply start coming down and push the steering pillar right forward until the machine has turned over on its

Because of Certain Deterrents There Isn't a Great Deal of It.

"We have hardly any crime in New Zealand," says an editor and lawyer

which crime is punished.

No other member of the committee supported his suggestion. Senators Reed of Missouri, of Kansas, and Weeks of Massachusetts, declared emphatically any attempt to limit the discussion of the bill. In a discussion of the bill, Mr. Untermyer criticized vigorously the definition of the character of the bill. He said, however, it would be able to permit the issue of a new amount of currency on cotton warehouse receipts.

gress on Hudson Bay.

AWA, Sept. 23.—Reports received by Hon. Frank Cochrane from Engineer Armstrong in charge of Hudson Bay Railway, showing that the completion of 150 miles by the end of October. Except for a filling in of several cuts, the line will be graded some 75 miles to Thicket Portage. It is reported, however, is slow, through the difficulty in securing steel. Sixty miles of steel are on hand and unless more ties can be secured only 70 miles of track can be laid. However, special effort will be made this winter to secure a supply of ties so that work will be finished in the spring.

nes May Be Arrested.

AWA, Sept. 23.—An arrest, it is said, yesterday, may follow Saturday shooting accident at Rockcliffe, when Quartermaster Sergeant Stanley Harris of the 6th Dragoon was almost instantly killed by a bullet. It is understood that the man, who fired the bullet, will be taken into custody on a charge of murder until circumstances are fully investigated, with a view to preventing further accidents. Harris has collapsed through in.

olen Goods Recovered.

STON, Sept. 23.—A large consignment of hats left in the travelers' room of the Randolph Hotel, when burglars secured an entry during the night. Yesterday police recovered nearly all the goods. Some were found hidden away in the old gun sheds on the street. Arrests are expected.

The row between the two railways still continues, and more trouble is threatened before the week-end. All Grand Valley employees have been sworn in as special railway constables.

Walked Far In Sleep.

BATTLE CREEK, Mich., Sept. 23.—The most remarkable case of sleep-walking on record here was disclosed when little Albert Crisfield, three years old, walked into a local factory at two a.m., while asleep, and in this condition he had crossed several railroad tracks, accompanied and protected by a faithful dog. Employees could not awaken the boy, and he was taken to the police station. For four hours the child failed to awaken, and finally his father came in haste to the police station to report that Albert had left his bed and disappeared.

May Fight For Local Option.

BRANTFORD, Sept. 23.—John F. Schultz has been appointed permanent secretary of the local option forces in Brantford, and the announcement was authorized yesterday that the work of securing signatures for the 25 per cent. petition to be presented to the City Council would be commenced Oct. 1. It is said that the local option forces, following success in the preparation of the petition, will insist upon a fight here next January. As yet no organization has been completed by the liquor interests to combat the propaganda.

An hour's fighting of a first-class battleship would cost somewhere about £180,000, or £3,000 a minute. In the case of H.M.S. Majestic the items would be, approximately: Four 12 inch guns, £38,000; pounders, £38,000; twelve 3-pounders, £21,000; eight Maxims, £1,700.

TRAIN DYNAMITED.

Thirty Passengers Reported Killed by Mexican Rebels.

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 23.—A north-bound train on the Mexican National Railway has been dynamited by the rebels near Vanegas, in the northern part of the State of San Luis Potosi. From the meagre reports received here it is believed that thirty were killed. The train left here Saturday night, but turned back at Vanegas on account of blown up bridges further north.

The locomotive passed safely over the dynamite charges, but the baggage car and two coaches were destroyed. The passengers killed were in the second-class coach. The telegraph lines have been cut both north and south of the scene. Troops were sent from San Luis Potosi yesterday to round up the rebels.

The victims were for the most part federal soldiers, it was reported. The number of injured was not given.

W. W. Marvin of San Francisco, the only American on the train, is said to have escaped injury, but was robbed.

Two dynamite mines were set off by electricity, it is said. The first-class coach was only derailed, but the baggage, express and two second-class coaches were blown to pieces.

British Olympic Fund.

LONDON, Sept. 23.—(C. A. P. Cable.)—While contributions, a penny and upwards, are slowly arriving for the Duke of Westminster's fund to secure the proper representation of Great Britain at the Olympic games at Berlin in 1916, a German count has made a grant of $75,000 to the German Olympic committee. This is in addition to a great public fund that is being raised in Germany.

The French Government will probably grant $100,000 towards the expenses of the French participants in the games, and a great Olympic fund is making progress in America.

The Duke of Westminster, who requires $500,000, has so far received $37,118.

Failures.

The only failure a man ought to fear is failure in cleaving to the purpose he sees to be best.—George Eliot.

the law-abiding spirit of the people, for the most part. There is another deterrent. It is the surety with which crime is punished.

"If a man has committed a murder in New Zealand he does not lie in jail for a year or two, as I am informed sometimes happens in other countries. We make an effort to bury him within two weeks after sentence has been imposed. With us a man may do pretty much as he likes so long as he does not interfere with the rights or interests of anybody else. The moment he does he comes in contact with the law.

"I cannot think of a single case of murder in our country in the last 20 years in which the murderer has not been caught and hanged. We inflict the severest penalties in every case. The rank of a man or his wealth are never in his favor in a court of law. It can procure him nothing, except a high-priced lawyer, perhaps. The excuse of insanity and the testimony of a corps of well-paid medical experts do not avail much. There is no appeal from the verdict of a court in a murder case, unless the judge himself thinks the verdict of the jury is against the evidence. Otherwise the conviction must stand.

"The judge may direct that the question as to whether the verdict was proper or improper be settled by the judges of the Court of Appeal. Unless this is done the man who has been convicted is hanged within two or three weeks. There have been instances when a prisoner has been given grace by the governor, but they are rare.

"In New Zealand we also proceed upon the assumption that a prison term is given for the purpose of acting as a deterrent to future crimes on the part of an individual or of other individuals. It is our theory that crime should be punished and we do this and severely. The class of sickly sentimentalists who believe in turning jails into luxurious hotels, where the prisoner may enjoy running water in his cell, a private bath, three-course meals and all the luxuries at the expense of the state that he might not be able to have if he were at large, is not strong with us. That is another reason why we have so little crime.

"If a man is convicted he is punished and that is an end to the matter."

City Life Not Always Degenerating.

Life in a great city does not necessarily lead to physical degeneration. There died a London fish hawk about four years ago who could trace his family back 200 years, and had never heard of any addition of country blood. He died within a few weeks of his golden wedding, and left 21 children, 71 grandchildren, and 20 great-grandchildren. None of the children married out of the London district in which they lived, except a soldier son who emigrated. The old man plied his trade until within two days of his death, and "could pull his barrow twenty miles; he had sinews like a young 'un, and not a corn on his feet."

A Modern "Cromwell."

Somebody has discovered on the electoral roll of the city of Melbourne, a gentleman named Oliver Cromwell, who by occupation is described as a "theatre packer." The duty of the "packer" is to squeeze as many people as possible into the pit and gallery. There have been complaints in Melbourne lately about his ungentle methods and his unchivalrous handling of women. Must take after his namesake.

PREMIER BORDEN'S
STEWARDSHIP

AT HALIFAX CONSERVATIVE RALLY
HE PRESERVES ELOQUENT SILENCE
REGARDING ONCE FAMOUS
HALIFAX PLATFORM.

Premier Borden, who has set the example for his cabinet ministers this summer in absenting himself from the Capital for the greater part of the time since Parliament prorogued, has been again spending a fortnight in Nova Scotia. He has regaled his constituents with an account of his stewardship and in the presence of the Canadian Manufacturers Association has again assured his high tariff friends that their interests are safe in the hands of their representatives in the government.

In giving an account of his stewardship at the Conservative rally at Halifax, Mr. Borden kept a discreet and eloquent silence in regard to the planks of the once famous Halifax platform of his Opposition days. Nothing was said as to the carrying out of the former unctuous pledges about civil service reform, purity of elections the cutting down of expenditures, Senate reform, the encouragement of the ship-building industry and other reforms which used to form the theme of Mr. Borden's addresses when appealing for support to the electors.

He did, however, emphasize the fact that the government last year had introduced closure in Parliament and modified "the obsolete rules of the House of Commons so that public business could be transacted with reasonable despatch." Mr. Borden for obvious reasons, did not note that these "obsolete rules" dated as far back as 1910 and that if they were obsolete, he, himself, must assume responsibility therefore since he was a member of the Commons Committee which revised the rules then and gave his imprimatur to these self-same "obsolete rules." Nor did he refer to the fact that in introducing closure next session, and a semi-official announcement that the government will leave the whole naval question over till the session of 1915.

The conclusion is obvious. Mr. Borden realizes that the emergency has been worked to death and has been effectively buried by the recent official statement of the Admiralty. He realizes that he can no longer rely on the emergency as a subterfuge for not announcing a permanent policy. But the announcement of a permanent policy involves an appeal to the people for ratification. That appeal the government will avoid as long as it in decency can. Political waters are too cold for a plunge next year if it can be avoided by the men now in power. Therefore, the whole naval question, so far as the government can do it, is to be shelved for a year or so. And with the naval question out of the way Mr. Monk can safely resume his seat in Parliament.

The game is so obvious that no comment is necessary.

COST OF LIVING MOUNTS.

MEANWHILE THERE IS TALK OF TARIFF REVISION UPWARDS AND NO FISCAL RELIEF IN SIGHT.

The cost of living still tends upward. Statistics published by the Labour department this week shows that during August there was another increase in the average cost of articles of general household consumption. The increase as compared with August of last year is about three per cent. Meanwhile the high tariff friends of the government are appealing for tariff revision upwards, especially in regard to wool and iron and steel commodities that vitally effect the cost of living. Meanwhile there is no suggestion from any government source of any decrease in tariff taxation of any fiscal relief to the general consumer. Meanwhile federal expenditures which will have to be met for the most part out of customs taxation, continue to mount. Meanwhile there is no sign of following the example of the United States in regard to reducing the duties on food stuffs.

Premier Borden seems to think that the problem of freer trade in food products has been solved by the action of the Democratic Congress in giving Canada freer access to the American markets. That was only half of the problem. The Canadian consumers, half of the problem still is to be met. The government will not solve it by running away from it.

obvious reasons, did not note that these "obsolete rules" dated as far back as 1910 and that if they were obsolete, he, himself, must assume responsibility therefore since he was a member of the Commons Committee which revised the rules then and gave his imprimatur to these self-same "obsolete rules." Nor did he refer to the fact that in introducing closure the government had abandoned all rules of parliamentary procedure whether modern or obsolete, had disregarded precedent and principal entirely, and had defied the constitutional of the minority and all sense of British fair play.

The Premier also made much of the allegation that the Liberal majority in the Senate had killed the movement for good roads by inserting amendments in the Government Highways Bill "which they knew the government would not accept." Mr. Borden did not say why the Cabinet would not accept these amendments nor did he specify what these amendments were. To account for this omission it is only necessary to state that the amendments provided merely for the safe-guarding of provincial rights and for the expediture of the money for public highways instead of for political good roads by insuring that the money to be appropriated under the bill should be sent by the various provincial governments directly instead of being manipulated in the interests of the political party at Ottawa.

About the only item of actual constructive statesmanship which Mr. Borden was able to present was the consummation of the reciprocal trade agreement with the West Indies. And even in this respect he was obliged to confess that the vital question of securing an adequate steamship service was still unsolved. However, he promised that Hon. G. E. Foster would continue his efforts and the people might still hope for some practical results.

MR. MONK SYNCHRONIZES.

PREMIER BORDEN DROPS ALL REFERENCE TO THE EMERGENCY AND MR. MONK ANNOUNCES HIS RETURN TO PARLIAMENT.

Coming events cast their shadow before them.

In his speech to the Conservative Association at Halifax on Tuesday last, Mr. Borden in dealing with the naval question had not a single word to say about "the emergency." He did say that "the genius of our race is to proceed in such matters slowly and cautiously and to depend rather upon experiments and experience than upon logic." The sentence is illuminative. Certainly in dealing with the naval question Mr. Borden did not proceed upon logic. Certainly he had proceeded "slowly and cautiously;" and if "experience" is to be the guiding principle, then there will be no reversion to Downing St. rule and no subversion of the principle of responsible government.

Synchronizing with Mr. Borden's dropping of the argument as to the emergency if the official announcement that Hon. F. D. Monk is to resume his seat in Parliament at the Canada freer access to the American markets. That was only half of the problem. The Canadian consumers' half of the problem still is to be met. The government will not solve it by running away from it.

THE CANDID FRIEND AGAIN.

Apropos of the request of the Grain Growers of the west for action by the Canadian Manufacturers Association in support of the movement for increasing the British preference to fifty per cent. with the aim of having free trade with Great Britain in four years, the Ottawa Citizen, the leading Conservative organ in the Capital again reverts to its role of candid friend to the government. In asking the Canadian Manufacturers and the government to give practical evidence as to the bona fides of "the talk about Imperial unity and loyalty to the common flag," the Citizen says editorially: "An Empire with tariff barriers erected across its own territory and separating its two parts, is certainly not even an approach to anything like an ideal. The Canadian manufacturers have a splendid chance to make a definite pronouncement this week. Atlantic ocean freight rates ought to be sufficient "protection" from British manufacturers to Canada's "infant" industries.

CARRY OUT INSTRUCTIONS.

Australian Boys Always Prepared to Deal With Snake Bites.

While in India about 20,000 persons a year die from snake-bite, only about 13 a year die in Australia, though a very large number get bitten. The low death rate in Australia is due to various causes. In the first place, the bite is usually received in the leg, which is protected to some extent by clothing, or on the hand. It is quite a usual thing for an Australian boy who puts his hand into a burrow or a hollow log in quest of a rabbit and pulls the hand forth with a venomous snake clinging to it—by no means an infrequent occurrence—immediately to take heroic measures. He chops off the bitten finger with a hatchet, which is almost always part of the equipment when boys are hunting rabbits, or gets one of his companions to do it for him. Failing this, he at any rate slashes the bitten finger vigorously with a knife to let the flow of blood carry away the venom, and ties a ligature tightly round his finger and round his arm, in order to check the return of the poisoned blood to the heart. In this he is carrying out the instructions which are posted by the Government of Victoria in every state school and on every railway station in the state.

On the school walls and station platforms are seen every here colored prints depicting some of the more venomous snakes, the two punctures of the poisonous reptile, the four pictures of the non-venomous, the cruciform incision which is recommended, and the best method of making a ligature with a stick for a tourniquet. The pictures are accompanied by explanatory letterpress in large type. Prof. McCoy, of Melbourne University, in a book about snake experiments, tells a strange story illustrating the courage of despair. Putting a mouse into a box that contained one of his captive cobras, he watched the reptile glide slowly towards it. The mouse shrank terrified into a corner, and then, when the cobra's flattened head was within an inch of it, sprang into the air and alighted on the back of the neck of its foe. It sat there and clenched its sharp little teeth in the reptile's flesh. The cobra could not shake it off, and it bit deeper and deeper until the cobra lay dead.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

"EAT LIME," HE SAYS

RUDOLPH EMMERICH HAS FOUND A NEW PANACEA.

He and Dr. Loew Declare That Devouring Cha'k Is the Infallible Cure For a Host of Diseases—Feeding Young Animals on Calcium Chloride Promotes Their Growth Amazingly.

Munich's famous bacteriologist, Rudolph Emmerich, and another famous Munich man, Dr. Loew, hold that swallowing chalk is the infallible arcanum of health. They say that if only people will add to their food a sprinkling of calcium chloride they will grow bigger, stouter, and stronger; they will resist disease, be always in a good temper, and live so long they will die of boredom with life.

Emmerich is professor of hygiene and bacteriology in Munich University. He has eaten queerer things than chalk. In 1895 Abdul Hamd brought him to Constantinople to study the cholera, and Emmerich ate several thousand cholera bacilli and inoculated his blood with other germs. He survived the ordeal, and no / claims that while eating cholera germs are merely harmless, the daily consumption of a sprinkling of chalk is curative and invigorating.

Emmerich and Loew have just concluded a series of experiments to test the influence of calcium chloride on the human body and the bodies of animals. They soon discovered that by feeding young animals on calcium chloride their growth and weight may be amazingly increased. Their first important experiment was with a litter of piglets. They divided the litter in two. In feeding one half of the litter they added to the food one

GAIETY AT HAMILTON

Centennial Festival Was An Uproarious Affair.

It is a singular fact that every Hamiltonian is an enthusiastic champion of his native city. Even those who have been away and know better affirm with amazing earnestness that Hamilton is not only the greatest city in the world, but that it boasts the handsomest women and the biggest supply of electric light, so that this great wealth of beauty can be seen by night as well as by day. We just all admit that Hamilton is a well-lighted city and that the beauty of her fair citizens is worthy of so much effulgence. But why have so many insisted that Hamilton is a place for rest and the full enjoyment of the quiet life? Why have we, with disdain, gone through on the train never even condescending to look out from the window? That has been because we have not known that Hamilton is the great manufacturing city of Canada; that her white coal is famous for power as well as for light; that her manufactures are shipped to the ends of the world.

In the train going over a man stood in the aisle of the dining car and sold with patriotic fervor about the biggest steel cable in the world being made in Hamilton! It is as thick as your two wrists! Not so very thick as some substances go, but for a gramme of calcium chloride for every kilogramme of the piglet's weight. That is, they gave to each piglet once a day a thousandth of its weight in calcium chloride. The other piglets were fed with exactly the same food as were the bechalked piglets, but they got no chalk. After seven weeks both batches were weighed. The piglets which had been chalked up were found to have increased by 155 per cent., and their rivals by only 75 per cent.

From this Emmerich and Iow conclude that the normal food given to animals and man does not contain enough lime. So they have made experiments with an ailing baby which had been putting on weight very slowly.

YOUR WALK

Do You Shuffle or Lurch, or Straddle or Just Toddle?

Unfortunately, there are quite a number of walking atrocities of which our sex are especially guilty. For example, there is the "lurch," an ungraceful walk directly attributable to worn heels. Doesn't every one know the sudden blood rush to the head and nervous shock accompanying the down-at-heel "lurch and recover"? While the wrench to the ankles, particularly if they be weak, is really harmful. If you would walk well you must attend to those heels of yours regularly.

Boots and shoes are the primary cause, also, of the "shuffle." In this case, the victim has probably acquired the habit through once wearing loose footgear. In direct contrast to this walk is the "bounce." The girl who indulges in it rises inordinately high on the ball of the foot. Such a gait, although possibly denoting a carefree disposition, looks not a little extraordinary, and, although the girl herself may not recognize it, detracts enormously from her nervous energy.

One of the most unsightly walks it is possible to see is the "straddle." Here a girl seems to throw her feet "where they list," rocking from one side to the other much in the same manner as a sailor. This means, of

possibly denoting a cheerful disposition, looks not a little extraordinary, and, although the girl herself may not recognize it, detracts enormously from her nervous energy.

One of the most unsightly walks it is possible to see is the "straddle." Here
a girl seems to throw her feet
"where they list," rocking from one side to the other much in the same manner as a sailor. This means, of course, that she is walking with her legs too far apart—an unforgivable offense. To correct this she should try and place her feet one before the other in as straight a line as possible with the toes turned outwards.

Then there are so many modern girls guilty of a ridiculous "toddle." This is nearly always the combined result of high heels and—one must be candid
to be kind!—tight-lacing. It is impossible not to toddle when the shoulders and hips are kept stiffly perpendicular and all the impetus comes from, as it were, within a cardboard mummy-case. As will at once be seen, there can be no free and graceful swing of limbs in these circumstances.

Never must the very slight rock of the shoulders and hips necessary to the ideal walk by any chance be exaggerated into an awkward "waddle." Nor should the naturally slight swing of the arms be allowed to develop into a "windmill" motion, evidently though erroneously considered to be "quite the thing" by the athletic young miss.

After so wholesale a criticism of these, alas! rapidly-increasing eccentricities of feminine gaits—a woman who walks really well is a rarity—it might be advisable to try and deduce from observation of the wrong way
the right way to walk.

First place the feet down heel first,
by a circular movement placing them
one in front of the other in as straight a line as possible with the toes turned well out, but not "spread-eagled." Secondly, balance the body evenly,
rocking the hips and shoulders very slightly in unison, at the same time lightly swinging the right arm with the forward movement of the left leg, and vice versa. Thirdly, rear the head squarely on the neck column, with a very, very slight tucking in of the chin.

Such is the perfect walk! And it is an accomplishment well worth acquiring.

When Pastures Are Dry.

The late summer is always a trying time for the dairyman. Flies are bad and pastures short. As soon as any shrinkage is noticed in the milk flow
some provision should be made for supplementary feed. Fortunate indeed is the dairyman who has a supply of silage left over to fall back upon at this time of the year. Sowing crops can be utilized to good advantage at this season. The results of allowing a dairy cow to shrink seriously in milk flow during this trying period often extend into the fall and winter season.
Even though it may seem troublesome and expensive to keep up the milk flow
at this period, it oftentimes will pay in the results which will follow later in the season.—Kansas Farmer.

both batches were weighed. The piglets which had been chalked up were found to have increased by 155 per cent., and their rivals by only 75 per cent.

From this Emmerich and Ioew conclude that the normal food given to animals and man does not contain enough lime. So they have made experiments with an ailing baby which had been putting on weight very slowly.
Considerable quantities of calcium chloride were added to the infant's food every alternate week, and the weight each week minutely recorded.
It was found that in the weeks when calcium chloride was eaten the rate of growth was one-third greater than in the weeks when ordinary food was given. Thereupon calcium chloride was administered with food every week, and the infant grew more than normally big, strong, and animated.

In the need of the animal body for lime there is nothing new. The novelty was in feeding animals with the chemical in an organic state. German military scientists show that districts with water rich in lime salts supply a larger proportion of conscripts than districts with soft water. Carnivorous animals eat the bones of their victims merely because meat contains very little lime and they are driven by instinct to seek a supply of lime in the lime-rich bones. The same instinct impels domestic fowls to peck
at stucco walls. Lime is normally found in large quantities in bones, lungs, and grey substance of the brain; but little is found in the muscles, except in the heart muscles, which contain four times as much as their share. The heart and brain, says Emmerich, require lime quite as imperatively as do the bones.

A lime-rich diet is necessary, but it is not enough. The chief articles of diet—meat, bread, potatoes, and fruit
of the apple and pear class—are all poor in lime. Rice, lentils, and cherries have much lime; figs have very much lime; egg yolks, cabbage, and strawberries still more lime. But richest of all is milk. That is why milk is the ideal food both for children and adults.

Second Ugliest Man on Earth.

Lufungu is a Congo chief who is rated as the ugliest man on earth.
But it is said that he might have to withdraw his claim to that distinction could he have met John James Hei-degger, London court favorite and manager of the opera, in the early part of the eighteenth century. Mrs.
Delaney described him as "the ugliest man ever formed," and he was so proud of it that he challenged Lord Chesterfield to produce a more hideous face in London. A woman was found who ran him very close, but when Heidegger put on her headdress
he was unanimously pronounced to be the winner.

In the train going over a man stood in the aisle of the dining car and told with patriotic fervor about the biggest steel cable in the world being made in Hamilton! It is as thick as your two wrists! Not so very thick as some substances go, but for a steel cable—well, as the small boy would say, "that's some cable." It was exhibited at the Armories, where there was a magnificent display of things made in Hamilton, and not only visitors, but ardent citizens as well, never would have dreamed that this city that was supposed to be sleeping under the mountain could display as extensive and so varied a collection of manufactured goods.

It was like a huge midway at a fair, with a plentiful and heterogeneous assemblage of side shows, and one had not paid full homage to Hamilton's greatness until one had seen the biggest man on earth, drunk a King George soda and eaten an Old Boys' sundae. The fully equipped celebrants were gay costumes of various descriptions, as at a carnival, and carried ticklers, bunches of confetti,
tin horns, megaphones, noisy twirlers,
cow bells, and miniature frying pans with gongs attached. The din of the amazing noises produced by these grotesque means was, to say the least, bizarre. Even the shouting of the "rooters" for the side shows scarcely could be heard. All these sounds were commingled with the blaring of merry-go-rounds, and the impromptu singing of "Auld Lang Syne" by scratch male choruses in front of a bar or in the middle of the market place.

The famous Hamilton market place witnessed a sight it will never see again. In one corner there was a wild animal show. Hard by there was a dip-the-dips, the dips, that was not proof against seasickness. Still hard by screeched a great merry-go-round of the natural motion variety. These attractions were somewhat different from the smallest pony on earth, the diving maidens, the huge boa constrictor, the crystal maze and the "only performing duck in captivity."

But the market place was still a market place. Backed up close against the curbstone stood the wagon loads of garden products as they have stood every Wednesday night for a generation. The sight of them in the midst of all the confusion and noise was an earnest of Hamilton's stability, a proof that on the morrow the steady commerce of the city would be resumed. Let them shout in the streets. Let them turn the market place into a fair ground. Let skyrockets and magic balloons ascend from Dundurn Park. Let the electric lights from a thousand generators blaze forth the triumph of a hundred years.
Hamilton is still Hamilton. She was not built in a day. And she must go on.—Adolphus Caryle, in Toronto Globe.

The Curate's Text.

Among clerical anecdotes it is that of the crowds to hear him.

I. O. D. E.

The sun smiled genially, if, perhaps, a little too warmly, upon a very picturesque and interesting scene last Friday afternoon, when the N. O. I. Cadets, very trim and soldierly in their new uniforms, received from the U. E. Loyalist Chapter their colours in the form of a large silk flag, handsomely mounted and suitably inscribed. The boys ably captained by Mr. W. McGreer went through their different manoeuvres very well, and, considering that the corps had only been formed ten days previously, they reflected great credit upon their drill master, Lieutenant Bagsley. After appropriate and interesting addresses from the inspecting officer, Major Gillespie, and Mr. M. S. Madole, who represented the school board, Mrs. Harshaw, Regent of the U. E. Loyalist Chapter gave the following address:—

"Mr. Principal, Major Gillespie, Ladies and Gentlemen:—

I regret extremely that a disappointment is ours to-day in the enforced absence of Colonel Ponton of Belleville whom we hoped would have been our guest, and have made an address on our behalf: The Colonel's telegram of regret reads as follows:—"

Belleville, Sept. 18th. 1913.

"To Mrs. Harshaw, Regent Daughters of the Empire, Napanee.

Regret exceedingly cannot accept privilege and honor extended by your kind invitation for Friday. Have tried to postpone previous appointment, but failed. May the sun shine on the colours.

W. N. Ponton."

"Officers and Cadets of the Napanee Collegiate Institute:—

It is a very great pleasure, that the opportunity is offered me of addressing a few remarks to you on this auspicious occasion, on behalf of the Imperial Order. Daughters of the Empire and of the United Empire Loyalist Chapter, of which I have the honor to Regent. We are very much pleased with the interest you have shown in your recently re-organized Corps, with your smart appearance, and the evidences of the excellent drill by which you have been benefited. As Sons of the Empire, do not allow your energy or interest in your organization to flag—keep up your "esprit de corps" and pride in your Company and rest assured that the Daughters of the Empire will watch your career with the liveliest concern. It affords the "United Empire Loyalist Chapter great satisfaction to have the privilege of presenting to you to-day a set of colours, that we trust you will value for all the old flag stands for. Do not forget all that the British traditions and institutions imply—and ever keep the Motto of the Imperial Order in your hearts, "One Flag, One Fleet, One Throne, One Empire. I now give into your keeping this sacred emblem of our Country's pride, the Flag of Hope and Glory.

God Save the King.

The Regent then took the colors from the Standard Bearer of the Chapter, Miss M. Simpson, and presented them on behalf of the U. E. Loyalist Chapter, to the Cadets who were lined up before her. Capt. McGreer stepped forward and received the flag, and after giving it into the charge of Lieutenant Ham, made a few happy remarks, thanking the Chapter for the gift. "The Maple Leaf for Ever" then sung. The Rev. Mr. Kidd made an eloquent patriotic speech to the Cadets, and was followed by Dr. Stratton who talked to them of the vastness of this Canada of ours as compared with other countries. God Save the King was sung by the assembled audience. Mr. McLean,

WORKERS OR SHIRKERS

Those dairy farmers who are fully noting the total produce each of their cows for the season finding some curious difference, instance, in one Ontario herd that of a 9 year-old grade that freshened March 5th was 4,080 pounds of milk to the end of July; her stable also 9 years old that freshened 12th, receiving the same feed as gave only 2,970 pounds of milk, half a ton of milk in that short indicates a considerable difference in income between two cows.

In another herd at the same time between two six-year-olds that April 3rd and 4th, there is a difference of 1,400 pounds of milk and 60 of fat up to the end of July means between fourteen and dollars that one cow earned more than the other. Are your cows workers or shirkers? Dairy records alone the means of ascertaining these beyond question. There is on the market a very useful little rack for brushes to be used in dishwashing. It contains a round brush for washing glasses and cups, a heavy brush for scrubbing pots and pans, a brush for plates and platters and a little round brush to reach the bottom of pitchers, vases and other narrow mouthed dishes. This little rack, with a printed legend above each brush stating its use, is made of enameled tin and can be hung conveniently over the sink. It costs, stocked with brushes, less than $1.50.

Brushes of all sorts can be best cleaned with ammonia or borax. If ammonia is used be careful not to get the handle of the brush in the water any more than is necessary, as the ammonia removes and whitens varnish and paint. Use a tablespoonful to a pail of soapy water. If borax is used add it to the hot suds in about the same proportion.

The Book of Nature.

At times of books I weary,
For reading makes me full
Of twisted, warped ideas
Not ripe enough to pull,
And then I turn to nature,
Its pages bright to scan,
Or in the crowded city
I read the book of man.

The sprightly printed pages
Present in full to me
A very fine idea
Of life as it should be,
But in the other volume
That men before me act
I get life stripped and naked
And as it is in fact.

The very fine romances,
The tale of love's young dream
May start off with some truth
But end with pie and cream
In life the paint and powder
Are very apt to rub,
The dainty little maiden
May finish at a tub.

Between the frames and covers
In fiction and in art
You get a race of people
Who live a life apart,
But in the book of nature,
Where truth on facts must
For all of its adornment
They give it to you straight.

WORKERS OR SHIRKERS?

The dairy farmers who are caring for the total production of their cows for the season are some curious differences. For example, in one Ontario herd the yield of a year-old grade that freshened 5th was 4,080 pounds of milk up to the end of July; her stable mate, a year-old that freshened March received the same feed and care only 2,970 pounds of milk. Over the year of milk in that short period is a considerable difference in the yield of two cows.

Another herd at the same factory in two six-year-olds that calved in the 4th and 5th, there is a difference of 1,000 pounds of milk and 60 pounds up to the end of July. This between fourteen and fifteen years of age, one cow earned more than the other. Are your cows workers or shirkers? Dairy records alone provide the answer. Forms for weighing and recording are supplied free by the division, Ottawa. In your letter state which you want.

WHEN "LAGS" ESCAPE

INGENIOUS METHODS ARE USED TO BREAK FROM PRISON.

Patience, Keen Wit, Set Purpose and Desperate Cunning All Contribute to the Successful Attempts to Pass Through Locked Doors—France Holds Record for the Most Sensational Jail Deliveries.

Not in all the annals of adventure will you find more stirring tales than those relating to escapes from great prisons. It is a war of keen wits, of long patience, of set purpose, and of passionate thirst for freedom, against every obstacle that can be devised. To a strong man with a lifetime behind bars in prospect, what is a year, two years, five years, spent in scraping away mortar with his finger nails?

His jailers have many things to think of besides his safe keeping; on the other hand, he is free to bend all his faculties, night and day, on ways and means, and the results are indeed full of human interest. I have often spoken with prison wardens on the subject and sat almost breathless with interest as tales were told of escapes and attempts so ingenious and daring that they commanded the admiration and sympathy—purely personal and unofficial of course—of even those stern disciplinarians.

Wardens have shown keys made of wire from tin cans and twisted strands of oakum—keys that would open massive doors with startling readiness. And think of a master key to almost every gate in a prison, forged by a convicted blacksmith entirely from memory! The man had seen the original displayed in the chaplain's belt two or three times and had so accurately impressed each angle and curve on his eager mind that the skeleton he reproduced with such patient labor was, if not a perfect copy, at least an effective substitute. But prisoners using tools of any sort, or having access to even the most unlikely material, will contrive keys, saws, files and other implements that accomplish miracles as open sesame.

Probably the French penal establishments yield the most interesting and romantic cases. The sentences are more severe and the prisoners are left more to their own devices, particularly at the famous prison of Noumea, in New Caledonia, a lonely island in a tropic sea. Severe punishments are in store at this convict station for men who attempt to escape. They are loaded with chains and thrown into a black hole, where many a man has lost his reason. Moreover, recapture after the alarm gun has been fired means a great prolongation of sentence. It is a sequel of the life in New Caledonia, however, that in spite of this, one will find young prisoners who have made a dozen attempts to escape and in consequence have cumulative sentences hanging over them amounting to 50 or even 100 years.

The latest and strangest case reported to Paris was one where two men had patiently cut their chains and made their bedclothes into petticoats by night. White caps and curls were skillfully fashioned out of picked oakum; and they dyed the lower part of their legs a dark blue to imitate long stockings. Thus disguised they made a bold bid for freedom. But the ocean forged fetters beyond even their sharp wits, and they had to give up after a day and night on a crazy raft, half drowned and delirious with thirst.

As to the great French prisons at Brest, Rochefort and Toulon, up till recently amazingly daring escapes were attempted and carried out; and,

CATTLE MARKETS

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Sept. 22.—At the Montreal stock yards, west end market, receipts for the week ended September 20 were 2600 cattle, 4200 sheep and lambs, 2100 hogs and 1900 calves, while the offerings on the market this morning for sale amounted to 2550 cattle, 3000 sheep and lambs, 1100 hogs and 1400 calves.

The feature of the trade continues to be the demand for common cattle, grass fed calves and lambs for shipment to the United States, of which supplies are liberal. There is also a good demand from local packing concerns for common bulls. Canning cows are selling as low as $2 to $3 per 100 pounds. Offerings of choice steers were limited.

There was no important change in the market for butchers' cattle owing to the fact that the supply was not in excess of the requirements and prices were firmly maintained. Really choice steers brought from $7 to $7.25 per 100 pounds.

The tone of the market for small meats was stronger owing to the increased demand from both local and American buyers for supplies, and a very active trade was done.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $7 to $7.25; do, medium, $5.50 to $6.75; do, common, $4.25 to $5; canners, $2.00 to $4.75; butchers' cattle, choice cows, $5.50 to $7.25; do, medium, $5 to $5.25; do, bulls, $4.25 to $5.25; feeding steers, $4.75 to $5; milkers, choice, each, $75 to $80; do, com. and medium, each, $65 to $70; springers, $55 to $60.

BEHOLD A NEW AGE ALREADY DAWNS

Pastor Russell's Address to Record Crowds.

The Wonders of the Past Century Rehearsed—They Are Foregleams of Messiah's Kingdom—The Blessings Promised for Thousands of Years Are Upon Us—Already in Them, Greater Wonders Are Coming—Scripture Prophecy Fulfilling—Evaluation Theory Incompetent and Unwise—Lift Up Your Heads and Rejoice—The Blind, Who See Not the Source of These Blessings, Discontented, Are Menaced—The Danger Should Be Guarded Against Wisely.

PASTOR RUSSELL

Memphis, Tenn., Sept. 21.—Pastor Russell addressed two large and deeply interested audiences here to-day, one in the Memphis Auditorium, seating capacity five thousand. We report one of his discourses from the topic, "The Golden Age of Prophet and Poet." His text was, "He that sat upon the Throne said, Behold, I make all things new."—Revelation 21:5.

The promise of a New Day has long been before God's people—in the Bible, said the Pastor. It was hinted to our first parents, six thousand years ago, that eventually the Seed of the woman should bruise the serpent's head. This is understood to mean that Satan's power will be crushed, and mankind delivered from sin and death.

A still more explicit promise was made to Abraham—"In thy Seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed." For centuries Abraham's posterity waited for Messiah. The Promph of Israel foretold the coming King of David's line, who would be a Priest, after the order of Melchizedek.

Even Jesus' disciples, who recognized Him as the "Sent of God," were disappointed that His Kingdom was not immediately revealed. Still the prophecies respecting Messiah's Kingdom were repeated and amplified in Jesus' parables, and finally in the Revelation which He gave His Church through St. John.

The heathen poets sang of a coming Golden Age—quite probably borrowed from the Hebrew Scriptures. They realized that a gracious God would not forever permit a reign of Sin and Death, but would eventually supplant the curse with blessings.

"Arise, Look Around Thee."

The Pastor then declared that after all these centuries of waiting, "God's people are awakening to a realization of the fact that we are living in the very dawn of the glorious epoch. Blessings have come down like a gentle shower, so quietly that we scarcely realized that earth has entered the Times of Restitution, foretold by St. Peter.—Acts 3:19-21.

made a bold bid for freedom. But the ocean forged fetters beyond even their sharp wits, and they had to give up after a day and night on a crazy raft, half drowned and delirious with thirst.

As to the great French prisons at Brest, Rochefort and Toulon, up till recently amazingly daring escapes were attempted and carried out; and, stranger still, coining money was constantly practiced in them. In the words of a government inspector, "It seems possible to make files or false keys in the shops by evading supervision; but to strike false money during the short hours of rest—to hollow out molds melt metals and complete the coins—seems incredible; yet it was successfully done."

At Toulon the great French forger, Suttler, was held in durance and his feats even in prison were a sore trial to the officials. One case is on record where official authority reached the prison for the release of a particular prisoner. All the documents and signatures were in perfect order and proper form, and the man would have been set free forthwith, were it not that one important paper was lacking.

Inquiry was started concerning this, when it leaked out that the letter containing the documents bore the postmark of Toulon and not of Paris. Further search disclosed an astonishing fraud. The orders were forgeries from beginning to end, prepared and carried out by the wonderful Suttler, who had forged every signature, including even that of the President.

The whole life of this prisoner was a strange romance. He had played many parts and displayed genius of a high order, whether clothed in broadcloth or rags. His end was mysterious. One night after displaying some marvelously clever forgeries to the officials whose signatures they purported to be, he went quietly to bed and was found dead next morning. Beyond doubt he had committed suicide; but the surgeons who performed the post-mortem were utterly at a loss to explain the cause of death. Only a week previously he had taught a fellow prisoner 10 or 12 ways of cutting the links of his chain, or of concealing the gaps in the partly sawed steel. To another Suttler sent straw basket which was confiscated by accident, and on pulling it to pieces each straw was found to contain a small file of wonderful fineness.

Usually the British system in convict prisons is perfect enough to detect a man's absence long before he can get clear of the jail precincts. On one occasion at Portland the usual bells were tolled and shots fired to give notice of escape. All the staff turned out with loaded rifles and half an hour later some of the civil guard casually too to prodding the soft ground of the vegetable garden with their bayonets.

All at once a wild yet smothered yell was heard from somewhere below the ground. And simultaneously the men were astounded to witness a spasmodic upheaval of freshly-turned soil. A bayonet point had pierced the flesh of the artfully buried prisoner and with a convulsive movement he sprang out of his strange grave.

TO BE NEAR HER SON.

Mrs. Thaw Arrives at Concord to Assist In Fight.
CONCORD, N.H., Sept. 23.—On the eve of the proceedings which are expected to decide whether or not Harry K. Thaw shall be returned to the insane asylum at Matteawan, he was joined here last night by his mother, Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw, and by his brother, Josiah. "I have come to give Harry the support of his mother's presence in his fight to keep away from the madhouse," Mrs. Thaw said.

Harry greeted his mother and his brother affectionately, just outside his rooms, and then the party retired to the apartments which had been reserved for Mrs. Thaw.

The only point that was definitely established last night was that the hearing which will be before Governor Samuel D. Felker, is that it will be held in the chamber of the Senate at the State House, beginning at 11 a.m.

The Duke's Patronage.

LONDON, Sept. 23.—(C. A. P. Cable.)—The Duke of Connaught has booked a hundred guinea box for the performance at the Coliseum, Oct. 11, arranged by Madame Sarah Bernhardt, in aid of Charing Cross and French hospitals, which the King and Queen are to honor with their presence.

James Bogns of Los Angeles the other day played "Swanee River" on a piano while standing upon his head.

An orchestra of twenty-five blind musicians led by a one armed woman conductor, recently played the whole of the music of "Rigoletto" at a performance of that opera in the theater at Oviedo, Spain.

A man in custody in an English jail the other day was found to have "one arm tattooed with the story of his courtships and the names of his loves, while the other arm contained a record of his family bereavements."

Many are still asleep. Some are confused. Others, having lost faith in the Bible, seek a solution along the line of evolution, claiming that a Nature God operates by blind force, under a law of the survival of the fittest. Surely they overlook the fact that there were great characters in the past with whom few to-day may be compared.—Shakespeare, Socrates, St. Paul, Moses and others.

The Bible Explanation Better.

The Pastor declared that the Bible explains that the wonders of to-day are foregleams of Messiah's Kingdom and its blessings; and that we are in the day of Jehovah's Preparation for the Kingdom of His Son. He pointed out numerous signs of the times, as foretold by the prophet.—Daniel 12.

This prophecy is noteworthy, not only because Daniel was a prophet greatly beloved of the Lord, but because the Redeemer attested its genuineness. In His declaration to Daniel God has wonderfully described our day in few words. The many running to and fro could seemingly refer to nothing else that the wonderful travelling which is a feature of our day and no other.

Pastor Russell then discussed modern transportation and educational facilities as signs of the dawning of the New Dispensation—the long-promised Messianic Kingdom.

Daniel's next statement is that the wise amongst God's people shall understand, said the Pastor. Educational advantages, Bibles in every language and leisure for study are favorable to their understanding. All over the world, classes of Bible students are forming, regardless of denominational lines and prejudices. The wise, trimming their Bible lamps and having them well supplied with the oil of the Holy Spirit, are understanding things hidden from past ages and generations.

Still another sign of the New Age declared to Daniel was, "There shall be a Time of Trouble such as never was since there was a nation." The Pastor did not dwell upon this sad feature, but regretted that unpreparedness for God's mercies and blessings made it necessary. The Redeemer mentioned this Time of Trouble, which we see looming up on every side and threatening the very foundations of society—political, social and religious.—Luke 21: 28.

Knowledge of God's Glory.

A prominent feature connected with the New Age will be the binding of Satan, who has deceived poor humanity for six thousand years. Continually has he misrepresented God's character and Plan, so as to turn mankind away from God in fear and dread, said the Pastor. Thus he has blinded their minds to God's glorious goodness, now shining in our Redeemer's character and in the promises of the Bible.

WHISTLING THE DOOR OPEN.

Quite Simple if You Can Whistle Loud Enough and in Tune.

Theoretically it is now possible for a man to lie in bed and whistle to the window to close; whistle to the taps in the bathroom to draw the water for his bath; whistle to an electric cooker to start the coffee or whistle to the door to open and admit a waiter with breakfast. A story is going the rounds that a London inventor has actually accomplished the last of these conveniences, but from a practical standpoint it sounds improbable.

The theory of it is simple. At the door is a piano wire tuned to a certain key, so that when the lazy man in the bed whistles in that key the wire will vibrate in sympathy. The vibrating wire strikes another wire, completing an electric circuit, and by means of a magnet the door is unlocked.

The same method could be applied in theory to accomplish the other results named and could be extended to innumerable other appliances, so that automatic servants would all respond to orders at a whistle.

Each appliance, tuned to a different key, would respond to a different whistle note.

Practically it would take probably more vigor to whistle loud enough from bed to operate the mechanism at the door than it would to get up and unlock the door, and even then the adjustments would have to be perfect. Furthermore, the whistling would have to be on the key, which would bar most people from the scheme.

Very few people are gifted with the ability to whistle a predetermined note on the key. In fact, most people have difficulty enough whistling to the key a few seconds after they have heard it correctly sounded on an instrument, and the lazy man with an ordinary key sense would be having the windows open when he really wanted more heat turned on.—Saturday Evening Post.

Built the Village Without Nails.

Without the use of nails an entire village of houses has been built in Alberta, Canada. These houses have been built by Ruthenian immigrants, and their architecture is novel. The first attempts at house building are usually of the kind they had been accustomed to in Europe, and their buildings are of the typical Ruthenian style—log, pitch roof, thatched and wide in the eaves. In many cases these buildings are put up without a dollar's worth of hardware. The door is of hewn logs, unnailed. The roof, as the favorite Russian roof always is, is a wonderful fabric of poles and cross woven wheat straw, ten inches thick, packed tight and solid and laid with such care that it will shed the weather for twenty years.

He Listened to All.

Fontenelle listened to everything, and he offended no one by disputing anything. At the close of his life he was asked the secret of his success, and he replied that it was by observing two maxims, "Everybody may be right" and "Everything may be so."

BUILDING A CAUSEWAY OF ROCK ACROSS AN ARM OF RAINY LAKE

The milestones of progress in Canada are bedded deep in the spectacular engineering achievements of its building railways. In this land of distances trade is transportation, and in every case where the genius of the constructing engineer has triumphed over the obstacles of nature, commerce has experienced an acceleration marked enough to attract wide attention.

Everyone is familiar with the great works of the older roads, but, until recently, little has been heard of the conquests of the Canadian Northern in this department of railway building. That virile, progressive road which is rapidly attaining the status of a transcontinental by the linking together of its separate clusters of line has many remarkable monuments to the outstanding ability of its builders. Within the next few years it will have added to these its tunnel and terminal in Montreal, its tunnel and terminal at Vancouver, and it will also have succeeded in stretching a great double-tracked causeway of granite across Rainy Lake, about midway between Port Arthur and Winnipeg.

Three and a quarter miles of drilling are involved in the driving of the tunnel through historic, old Mount Royal in Montreal; from three to four miles will probably be necessary for the entrance to the terminals in Vancouver; this rockway across Rainy Lake will be almost three miles long and will cost very close to one million dollars a mile. In this country the railways have developed the habit of proceeding with great constructive projects without initiating the public to the significance of the work. There has been no departure in this case. The Canadian Northern have been engaged upon it continuously for the past two or three years and so quietly has the task been conducted that very few people in Canada to-day are even aware that anything out of the ordinary is occurring there. Yet so much progress has been that the company looks forward to its early completion. Indeed it is even hinted that the heavy wheat trains from the west this fall will roll smoothly over its solid length on their way to the waiting freighters at the head of Great Lakes navigation. While this is hardly probable owing to the nature of the difficulties still to be met, it is so far advanced as to be an important factor in transportation in Canada in the near future.

The Canadian Northern Railway came into existence just when the tide of immigration from other countries began to be deflected Canadaward. It came into the national life because of the compulsion of the need of additional transportation facilities. If Canada's expanding prosperity was to continue many new lines had to be built, especially in Western Canada. The nations need, and calls, were responded to by two men, builders of railways, who secured a dormant charter and laid down twin lines of steel across one hundred miles of new, sparsely settled land in Manitoba. That line was completed about Christmas time in 1896 and was operated successfully. It connected the village of Gladstone with a settlement, now the thriving town of Dauphin. Immigration continued to increase rather than diminish, and, in response the lines of the new company began to nose their way out over the new country that had been selected for the founding of homes by the newcomers.

of Gladstone with a settlement, now the thriving town of Dauphin. Immigration continued to increase rather than diminish, and, in response the lines of the new company began to nose their way out over the new country that had been selected for the founding of homes by the newcomers. That was less than seventeen years ago. To-day the one hundred miles has grown into nearly seven thousand, has spread over six provinces, and will shortly graduate into the transcontinental class with terminals at both Atlantic and Pacific tidewater. In the beginning the road was consecrated to development and the vows have been kept down to this day. The Canadian Northern did not follow the lines of least resistance and parallel existing lines. The policy was to avoid that. The road wanted to give transportation where its blessings had been sadly lacking before. It sought out new territory and then started in to increase that particular district's population and prosperity.

At the beginning of this century the development of the western province demanded a new outlet to lake navigation. The Canadian Northern set itself to the task and in 1901 construction was in progress on a new line to connect Winnipeg and Port Arthur. Conditions compelled rapid construction. Consistent in its policy the company sought a route for its line to the south and finally decided to tap the iron deposits of the Atikokan and Mattawin ranges in the hope that great development would follow the steel. That development is taking place to-day. But the line as located crossed an arm of Rainy Lake. That could not be avoided and the desired object attained. The crossing proved difficult and threatened to hold up the opening of the line. The west was impatient and the company finally decided to throw a series of trestles across the three miles of water and open the road at the earliest possible moment.

In 1910, with its transcontinental rapidly taking shape, a survey was made to locate a crossing worthy of the project. It was thought first that a series of steel bridges would do. This did not work. The investigation continued and a little later the news filtered through that the company was seriously contemplating the building of a double tracked permanent way of rugged granite construction. This was to connect a series of little, rocky, pine-clothed islets from mainland to mainland. Work began without fuss. Soundings were taken with rods driven down to the rock and the location determined in similar manner as where hills and valleys have to be contended with. Estimates were compiled of the number of tons of rock required to get down to solid rock. Incidentally these estimates were later completely vindicated.

Early in the summer of 1910 the contracts were let and preparations for the task begun. By July station men were starting short fills out from the shores of some of the islets. On September 16 of the same year the first big "shot" was fired and in October digging by the steam shovels was inaugurated. That winter two shovels were kept at work and in the following summer four were in commission. Until the fall of last year those four shovels attended by eight standard gauge locomotives, two "dinkey" engines, and sixty dump cars, forwarded a steady stream of rock to the dump. The biggest output in one month was 50,000 cubic yards of rock. For one steam shovel in one day the record was 155 cars, or, who spring the holes repeated dynamite until a pocket large enough to contain the explosive necessitates a giant blast is made. Then a lot of holes are loaded and wired, are fired by electric current, are the so-called "big shots." In class there have been about 75 a day from ten to fifteen thousand yards. The largest contained pounds of dynamite and broke 50,000 cubic yards of rock.

The total rock filling will amount to nearly a million cubic yards, all solid, in original position. The haul was one mile. The fact is so big that one fails to grasp it actually following the rock from (end) to end of grade. The load a car with broken rock in minutes.

There are some remarkable facts about this work. It will bulk enough to create an impression and astonishment in the mind of a casual visitor. From that start it will appeal to the general public. But to the engineer and the man who knows something of the difficulties attendant upon colossal construction works, the peculiar to the building of this way, and the methods resorted to by the contractors to win out, will give its greatest charm. The always problems to met in building permanent way through water in this case the C.N.R. had to meet difficulties greater than usual on the length of the "fill" over all the depth of the water. Besides, Lake is navigable and the passage of the steamers, and also the timber mills at Fort Frances and points in the Rainy Lake country could not be interfered with.

translate, about 900 cubic yards, single rocks loaded by these 90 hovels weighed more than 20 tons. On May 1st, 1911, dumping commenced the second channel filling, three and four feet across. Forty trains of rock, every day for a year, dropped before this was completed. Repeatedly, for two weeks at a time, this dumping was continued a car length before the tracks were extended ahead. Sometimes settlements occurred during the long hours and trains and crews were escapes.

Electric power—a voltage of 6,000—brought from Fort Frances. That distance of seven miles. Two rows of two hundred horse power run two compound air compressors which supply 1040 cubic feet of air per minute to one hundred pounds per square inch, at which pressure pipes carry this air to the . . . These put down holes as far as twenty-eight feet, tapering in diameter three to two inches. Following drillers come the "powder" men, spring the holes repeatedly with dynamite until a pocket large enough to contain the explosive necessary for a blast is made. Then a group of men are loaded and wired. They are fired by electric current. These are the so-called "big shots." Of this there have been about 75 average-size shots to fifteen thousand cubic meet the latter exigency the company decided to throw two lift bridges of modern type across two waterways at convenient points. As there is nothing very new about that the accomplishment is only a matter of time. But in the beginning the contractors spent many an anxious hour in evolving a method to successfully do the apparently impossible in dumping rock ahead of the fill in water. The men who finally submitted the adopted plan established a precedent in engineering as far as can be learned.

The dumping apparatus really is a floating bridge. It consists of two plate girders six feet high and 140 feet long. These are placed 30 feet apart and support a pair of tracks as on the ordinary bridge. The forward, or water end, is floated by a barge 34 feet wide and 112 feet long; the embankment end rests on the permanent way when the dumping is in progress and is upheld by a crosswise truss between two small barges, one on each side of the grade when floating is effected to a new position ahead. The trains loaded with rock are run out on this floorless bridge and the contents of the cars hurtle down to the lake bottom. About one-third of the grade is added afterward by side dumping as the bridge is moved on.

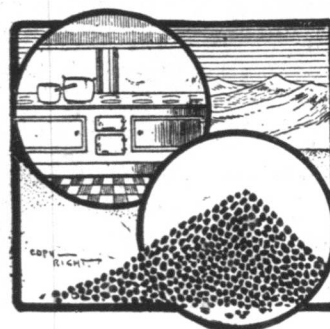

Hope has been entertained by the Canadian Northern that the big rock fill would be ready for operation this

Hope has been entertained by the Canadian Northern that the big rock fill would be ready for operation this fall. That is possible, but from the nature of the work still to be finished it is likely the opening date will have to be extended into 1914. That means it should be ready for service about the time the C.N.R. connects its eastern and western Canada lines by the completion of the steel between Sudbury and Port Arthur. It is stated positively that the steel will be laid on this line by the end of the year. It will be given its final touches for operation as rapidly as possible. The line through Yellowhead Pass that will join the western provinces with the Pacific coast at Port Mann and Vancouver will not be finished till a little later. But it is being driven through as rapidly as any other piece of Canadian Northern line has ever been driven, and through trans-continental trains should be leaving Montreal, Toronto, Ottawa and other eastern cities in 1914. That line complete will be a revelation to the Canadian people. It will have gradients as low as any cross-continent line in the world and tourists and fishermen and hunters, in fact all lovers of the splendid outdoors will find along its lines the largest measure of entertainment to be had anywhere.

CHAPTER VI

NOLAN faced Brand.

"Come, come, Wheeler," he said. "Let's drop the subject now."

"Mr. Brand, you are forgetting your place," contributed Phyllis.

"Michael," insisted Mrs. Nolan, "are you going to let this young man ruin the whole of us? I, for one, am glad Judge Bartelmy has taken us up, and if it wasn't for the way Mr. Brand runs wild with that paper—her voice broke—"others might." She crossed to the door at the left. "Here we've squandered money right and left and nobody would have anything to do with us. I declare I was happier poor. At least when I asked anybody to eat then they came. Look at that table in there"—she pointed—"groaning with good things to eat, and there's $100 for both house grapes, and nobody's touched 'em!" She picked up a bunch of grapes from a stand and began to eat them.

"Mother," laughed the husband good naturedly, "I've seen you get away with three bunches all by yourself."

"Well, I felt it was my duty not to let them go to waste." She burst into tears. "Come on, Phyllis," she managed to say, and the heartbroken mother and daughter went from the room.

"You mustn't mind what mother says," Nolan said to Brand. "She's been kind o' lonely since she came back to New York."

The editor's heart swelled with sympathy for the woman whose ambitions for herself and her daughter had caused the bitterest pain that injured pride can give. He saw that it would be difficult for her to learn that social position in a big city can be won only by skillful maneuvering, the ability to do which Mrs. Nolan apparently did not possess.

"Oh, I understand!" he answered feelingly.

Brand and Nolan went into the library to smoke. Hardly had they disappeared when Pitcher entered the drawing room as an escort for Judge Bartelmy and his daughter Judith. Brand had not erred a few minutes previous when in the same room he had pronounced the judge to be the best "handler of people" in the city. The conversation which ensued between the jurist and his daughter as they awaited their hostess well illustrated his reasons for accepting, with his daughter, Mrs. Nolan's invitation.

ing kings and their armies like pawns on a chessboard. They were always very tactful, Judith, those princes of the past."

"Oh," she admitted, "you never fail to illustrate your point, whatever it is."

"Just imagine," said her father, "what one of those old fellows would do in this case."

"Yes, I suppose you're right, and in the end you'll make these people see how wrong they've been about you."

"Oh, yes!" he went on confidently. "As they become accustomed to their prosperity you will find that the demagogism of their paper will be modified and ultimately vanish." He seated himself near his daughter.

"That would be a terrible blow for Wheeler, wouldn't it?" she suddenly asked.

"Wheeler! Oh, Wheeler! He's an entirely different type—the idealist, the fanatical idealist. I'm sorry. I always liked the boy. His heart's all right, but his head's all wrong, and I hope he's merely passing through a phase."

"I don't think you quite understand Wheeler, father," responded Judith, rising.

He took hold of the girl's hands. "Oh, yes, I do! Just now he has lost himself in a labyrinth, and it will take an Ariadne to lead him out. I believe the right woman might bring him to reason." He paused significantly. Judith lowered her eyes from his. "I forgive him any annoyance he may have caused me, and I hope you will forgive him too. I want you and Wheeler to be friends again and, like the princess in the fairy stories, live happily ever after." He patted her fondly on the shoulder.

Mrs. Nolan entered the room and, aglow with excitement, greeted her guests.

"Judge Bartelmy, I hope you haven't been waiting long?" she inquired anxiously.

"Not at all."
"It is so good of you to come."
"Oh, I wouldn't permit anything to keep me away!" he replied. "I've just had the pleasure of adjourning a rather important conference to be here."

This confession filled the fluttering heart of Mrs. Nolan with pure ecstasy. She could barely contain herself as she in turn greeted Judith Bartelmy.

Pitcher announced another name that appeared in the social register.

"Mr. Dupuy," he announced. He had come to keep his appointment with Nolan.

"How do you do, Mr. Dupuy?" greeted the hostess, shaking hands warmly with him. "Here's Judge Bartelmy. He's just adjourned a most important conference to come to our tea. Pitcher, tell Mr. Nolan the judge and Mr. Dupuy are waiting. Say the judge has just adjourned his court to come. Miss Bartelmy, Phyllis will be so delighted to see you." She grasped Judith's arm and led her to a door, speaking rapidly as she did so. "Phyllis wants to show you her new gown Quinlan brought over from Paris. Very smart effect, but $450, and you could hold it in the palm of your two hands—a rag!"

"An amusing character, our hostess," commented Bartelmy dryly to Dupuy.

"Yes; she seems very appreciative of your daughter's visit."

"Well," decisively, "she certainly ought to be."

"I suppose we shall see it in the Ad-

that the owner of the Advance would capitulate and become his friend. As for Judith, she little comprehended the entire significance of her father's attitude, and it she had, her frank, genuine nature, which revolted at trickery and deceit, would not have permitted her to continue to do his bidding. She admired and loved her father.

She knew that her mother before her had aided her father in his work and ambitions to a considerable extent, and now that her mother was no longer alive she felt it her duty to fill her place in every possible way. After all, she had only a young woman's knowledge of the ways of men in the business and professional world, and she could discern in the attacks on her father nothing beyond what he himself had taught her to believe—that they were the efforts of envious men or ignorant reformers or misguided fanatics, who assailed him entirely without just cause. However, it would seem that the judge would in any event have attempted to conceal from others his motives for procuring the presence of Judith at the Nolan home on this day. It would seem, no matter how low he had sunk, that he would have denied that he had ever employed her unsuspectingly as a decoy on other occasions. That was the least this father could do for his daughter. But he made no attempt to protect her reputation, at any rate to Dupuy, for in answer to the lawyer lobbyist's remark that he had done "just the right thing to bring Miss Judith today" he replied with his characteristic coolness:

"Oh, in matters of this kind my daughter is of the greatest help to me!" After a moment he continued, "I don't at all like your idea, Dupuy, of my proposing this man Nolan at the club."

"That's our trump card," insisted the other. "Every man has his price—even this young Brand if we could only find out what it is."

CHAPTER VII

BRAND and Nolan came out of the library after their smoke and were surprised to find Judge Bartelmy and Dupuy in the drawing room. Brand did not appear enthusiastic at the circumstance and, nodding stiffly in the general direction of the two men, proceeded to circle around them toward the door leading to the hall.

Judge Bartelmy advanced pleasantly toward the newspaper owner, who greeted him courteously.

"Judge, this is an unexpected honor." "An honor to come—believe me, Mr. Nolan, an honor to come."

Nolan saw Brand's dexterous maneuver toward the door, and on calling to him not to go he halted, turned toward the center of the room and stood watching the strangely assorted group of men.

Nolan next addressed Dupuy, who expressed his thanks at the granting of his request for an interview.

Judge Bartelmy, always quick to notice every detail or phase of what was transpiring in his immediate presence, saw that Brand was ill at ease. He called to him cheerily:

"My daughter and I were just speaking of you, Wheeler. The reformer sails a treacherous sea."

"The port is in sight, Judge Bartelmy," was the calm answer.

Bartelmy would have made a suc-

ic, and that is because he is you I am old."

"He'll outgrow that, judge. Yer will," remarked Dupuy, crossing Nolan's side.

"But under every system of government," pronounced Bartelmy in best judicial manner, "there h-ways been conservative and parties, whose leaders, while differed perhaps in method, have stimulated by an equal love try."

"That is true, Judge Bartelmy Brand, but I can't concede it belong to the conservative part."

The judge showed surprise. "But I don't understand you stammered, when Brand went terminally."

"Are you not seeking to in into our country methods of ment undreamed of by our thers?"

The judge laughed as the agreeable tolerance. His skill bal parrying was standing him stead.

"Oh, I had as much enthusiasm in my youth," he said, "I legal training has forced upon certain unfortunate exactitude thought. But come, come. Lawyers have long since learned we cannot carry our quarrels court. For instance, of a morn best friend, Judge Culver, may drawn swords with me over point of law, but the same even find us hail fellows well met, ending stories before a club fire."

Nolan nodded his head understandingly.

"Yes, judge, that's life—that he commented.

"Half the laws of our country framed up in clubs," interjected Dupuy.

Bartelmy raised his hand and a gesture of disapproval.

"I wouldn't say that."

Brand saw an opportunity to evade the laws are framed clubs," he shot at Dupuy.

Bartelmy pretended to side Brand.

"That's neat, Wheeler," he said. "He scored off you that time, D Bartelmy paused. He had bowed a point where he was ab make his supreme effort to c Nolan and the Advance, to mak friendly to him. Dupuy watched the effect of my's words on Nolan with eagerness. It was an anxious m for both Dupuy and Bartelmy Nolan accepted they felt that were safe. As for Nolan, he greatly perplexed. afternoon. I'm doing you a great favor to come to this one."

"Yes, my dear; I appreciate it, but social duties!"

The girl laughed shortly.

"Now, this doesn't come under the head of social duties."

"Oh, yes," the judge answered quickly, "if you view society in its broader sense. Beyond your little world is a larger one where caste is of small consequence and where all men should be of service to each other."

"But the Nolans—they certainly haven't been of service to you?" questioned the girl.

He glanced sharply at Judith.

"But I wish them to be, and were getting on—we're getting on."

"Their paper keeps going for you just as much as ever, father. I don't suppose one ought to mind it, but I do."

"Judith, Nolans have lived in every age in every country," pronounced the jurist. "He's a composite of anarchist and autocrat. Eventually the autocrat in him will triumph. Just now he's pounding old institutions. I, for instance, represent to him the judiciary, and he attacks me. No consequence whatever, but I'm here in defense of the United States bench. My cause is the cause of my colleagues. I tell you, Judith, I know the breed. I know how to get the venom out of his fangs. Diplomacy, my dear—diplomacy!"

Judith became enthusiastic.

"Father, I believe you would have been a great prime minister in the old days!"

The judge straightened up, smiling pleasantly at his daughter's complimentary estimate of him. "Hardly that, hardly that," he protested. He became reflective. "They were feeble old men, for a thousand years courteously movtag!"

"An amusing character, our hostess," commented Bartelmy dryly to Dupuy.

"Yes; she seems very appreciative of your daughter's visit."

"Well," decisively, "she certainly ought to be."

"I suppose we shall see it in the Advance tomorrow," suggested Dupuy.

"Oh, of course!" Bartelmy laughed amusedly.

"By the way," remarked Dupuy, "did you see the evening papers?"

A serious look came into Bartelmy's face as he said:

"I glanced over them on my way up-town, and their accounts of my decision this morning are not at all objectionable."

"No blood drawn," said Dupuy reassuringly. "A little surprising, too, for the Lansing Iron people have been in pretty bad odor with the public ever since the receivership matter last year."

"That was the beginning of all these attacks upon me. I hope the morning papers will treat me fairly."

"Oh, there will be no trouble about them. They have not investigated the matter thoroughly enough yet, of course, excepting the Advance. But you did just the right thing today to bring Miss Judith."

Bartelmy was showing not the slightest hesitancy at using his beautiful and accomplished daughter as a decoy in his plottings. In the first place, he desired that she should marry Wheeler Brand, hoping that the young reformer's zeal against him would disappear; secondly, by prevailing on her to pay attention socially to the Nolan family he was confident transpiring in his immediate presence, saw that Brand was ill at ease. He called to him cheerily:

"My daughter and I were just speaking of you, Wheeler. The reformer sails a treacherous sea."

"The port is in sight, Judge Bartelmy," was the calm answer.

Bartelmy would have made a success on the stage. In fact, he had been acting a part most of his life and proved the truth of Richard Mansfield's aphorism that "the best actors are never seen on the stage." At Wheeler Brand's significant reply, which smote as ominously on the ears of the judge as it did on those of Dupuy, the jurist gave an inward shiver quite imperceptible to the eye and replied in the most jovial of manners:

"So? So? That's good. That's worth while. Stick to the helm, my boy," he laughed.

"Brand ain't at sea, judge," put in Nolan good naturedly. "He's in the clouds. The air up there makes your nose bleed; but, by the Eternal, you see all that's going on down here."

There was much "going on down here" that Bartelmy by all means preferred to have remain unseen, yet he managed to reply, with an attempt at sincerity:

"More power to you, Wheeler! More power to you!"

Nolan stepped toward the jurist.

"You're a generous foe, Judge Bartelmy," he said warmly, deceived by the smooth tactics of the judge.

"Foe? That's hardly the word," responded Bartelmy, and with deference: "Wheeler and I merely energize differently. He is dynamic; I am stat-

Nolan gave a spirited but kindly re-

"Hold your horses, Wheeler. You know I don't care anything about this social stunt for myself. It don't fit into my life, but remember I've got a family, and nothing comes ahead of them. Mother and I may have a jangle now and then; but, after all, we have been side partners for a good many years. And my girl! There ain't a finer educated or a prettier girl in New York, and she ought to be able to go anywhere, but she can't in this town—this cold man's town. Then, of course, there's Sylvester. I know he ain't as bright as he might be, and I've spent—well, more than twice your salary trying to get him through freshman year at Harvard, and I couldn't,
but still he's my son, and if he wants to run around with these other sports,
why not? I can afford it, and I guess the kid's got to sow his wild oats anyway. My wife and children ought to be happy with the money I've got, and,
as I figure it, if I join this Oak Door club I can help them to get what they want. Do you follow me, Brand?"

"Yes; I understand," sighed Brand.
"At first you took up the side of the people, and you are continuing at it.
But you and your family have become ambitious, or, at least, so far as you are concerned, you are ambitious for them. When you begin to associate familiarly with rich men as their friend
you'll soon find yourself playing golf or billiards with one, drinking whisky
with another, and your son will marry the daughter of a third. You will forget all about the people. Your paper will become decadent and feeble. The circulation will dry up." He paused for breath and added warningly in strong tones, "The Advance is now at its zenith, but its decline begins the very day that you are elected to the Oak Door club."

Nolan reached over and seized Brand
by the shoulder.

"Wheeler, you're a decent sort of a fellow. I like you and the things you've made the paper stand for, but you don't know what it means to put people that you love on the altar and cause them suffering for the sake of these—these general principles."

"Don't I!" exclaimed the young editor. "Well, that's exactly what I've done. I gave up the girl I loved, who had promised to be my wife, so that I might write the truth." In spite of the emotion which his words had aroused in him Brand's voice never faltered as he spoke.

"You did!" exclaimed Nolan amazed-
ly. "Well, my boy, I don't understand
you. I couldn't do that," he confessed.

"Don't think that it was easy for me to do. I've thought of her every hour of every day since, but she"—now his voice wavered—"well, she's forgotten, so it doesn't matter. Mr. Nolan, do you remember what it was that first brought us together?"

"Yes; that story about Judge Bartel-
my, and it was a good one, and you've followed it up with a lot of good ones since. Why, Wheeler, there ain't a man in the country that can work up a series like you can. But, do you know, I'm beginning to think that the judge is not all bad. Mind you, I'm not forgetting old scores, but"—he seated himself—"did you ever think of it, perhaps we haven't all the facts of that affair? Some things have happened. Are you sure that he's so all would you acknowledge then that he's

"Why, yes, of course I would."

"Will you let me print that story in my own way and promise not to interfere?"

"Yes. But the girl," Nolan reminded him—"how do you think she'll feel if you print that story?"

But Brand was not to be swerved
from his purpose.

"It can't be helped. I've got to go on. Somehow you know the thought comes to me that perhaps it all may turn out for the best."

"Well, I hope so," commented the newspaper owner, "but, man alive, this story you!"

He was forced to cease abruptly, for Judge Bartelmy and Ed Dupuy entered the drawing room and drew near.

CHAPTER VIII.

THE abruptness with which Brand separated from Nolan
as they appeared aroused the suspicions of both the judge and his lobbyist satellite. However, they little imagined the pronounced seriousness of the conversation they had interrupted. In the mind of each ran the thought that the Advance's proprietor and his editor had been discussing the proposal to elect Nolan to the Oak Door club. Even a failure in this laudable venture they would have considered a serious setback, but probably had they an intimation regarding the story Brand wanted to write and the effort that was to be made to detect the judge in offering a money bribe they would have exhibited less of the easy assurance that marked their re-entrance into the drawing room.

"Mr. Nolan, I'm afraid I must be going," said Bartelmy. "I hope to see you at my house soon, and you, too, Wheeler."

Nolan rose from his chair.

"Judge, can you spare me a few moments?" put in Brand resolutely.

The judge gave a look of surprise.

"Certainly, my boy; certainly. Will you excuse me?" turning to Nolan.

Nolan, surprised at the readiness of Brand to begin on the plan to entrap Bartelmy, readily assented and proceeded into the library with Dupuy.

"Well, Wheeler, what can I do for you?" asked Judith's father.

The young man stepped close to the other and faced him squarely.

"Judge, how about your latest decision in the Lansing Iron case today?"
he asked.

Bartelmy started back in surprise.
"It was in accordance with the statutes and the constitution," he finally pulled down over your eyes. Half an hour later Dupuy came out of the same house. Ten hours later you handed down your decision reversing on a technicality the judgment of the lower court in the Lansing Iron case and freezing out the small stockholders in favor of the insiders, as usual. Those,

Judge Bartelmy, are my facts!"

Bartelmy made a desperate effort to retain his self control and to command
his ability to think clearly and effectively in this dire emergency. At last,
he spoke after minutely scrutinizing
the accusing figure of Brand before him.

"It's easily explained, Mr. Brand,"
he said in honeyed tones. "It's a lie;
that is all it is. Your reporter lied."

"I was the reporter," exclaimed the accuser in a supremely contemptuous manner, and as he spoke he wondered and marveled that such a man as the betrayer, Bartelmy, could be the father of such a girl as Judith—Judith,
whom he was even now, he was convinced, putting away from his arms
and his love for all time.

The false judge paled. His mouth became parched. Had he not leaned against a chair for support it is likely that his knees would not have retained enough strength to hold him up. The jig was up. Plainly the end was in sight. Indeed, it had already arrived unless—unless— Yes, there was one possible way out—if Brand would listen to the proposal. Listen? Every man had his price. Dupuy had told him so. He knew it anyway, and Brand was poor. He was ambitious too. Ah, reasoned the false judge, that is a dangerous combination—por-

"Mr. Nolan, the half hasn't been told about Judge Bartelmy," cried Brand.

"Well, this is getting to be a pretty serious affair. We can't be too sure about our facts."

"Yes, it was, and he's using her just as he did her mother before her."

Brand took a deep breath.

"Why, he surrounded her mother with machine politicians and shady financiers and crooked lawyers. He sent her to the state capital when he wanted to be senator, but it was im- possible; to Washington when he wanted to be minister to France, and she failed, and again when he wanted to be judge, and she succeeded, and when she found out that he was using his judicial office to steal and that she had only been a lobbyist for his rotten schemes"—

"Why don't you go to the girl and tell her?" suggested the newspaper owner.

"About her mother and why she died?"

"Well, perhaps not. But I hope you won't follow the Bartelmy story any further. I'll be just as well pleased."

"I've got to follow it, Mr. Nolan. I can't stop," ejaculated Brand. "I've got the goods on him now. I've got a story that will drive him off the bench when we print it."

"True; every word of it." Brand paced nervously across the room.

"For God's sake, Wheeler, don't go off at half cock!" cried Nolan.

"Half cock! Why, I tell you I've got the facts. I've been working on it for months."

"Now, listen to me. You're a young man. In spite of what you say about him I know that in his public life he's mighty well thought of by some of the most prominent men in this city, and"—weakly—"well, if they believe in him I don't—see —why"—

Bartelmy started back in surprise.

"It was in accordance with the statutes and the constitution," he finally said.

"The supreme court of the United States was at variance with you in a similar case," advised Brand.

"Sir," indignantly, "I decline to discuss out of court questions relating to my conduct on the bench."

The judge moved as though to go.

"You weren't so particular this morn- ing."

Bartelmy began to lose his confident, easy pose.

"I fail to comprehend you," he answered.

"Early this morning, between 1 o'clock and 3," went on the unrelenting editor.

The judge turned his head to one side and tugged nervously at his gray beard.

"A reporter for the Advance saw you come out of your house at four minutes to 1 and walk to a house on Washington avenue that belongs to the attorney for the Lansing Iron corpora- tion."

Bartelmy turned his back on Brand, a furtive look coming into his eyes as he did so.

A child adopted from an orphan's home was being ridiculed by the other children because he had no real par- ents. The conversation went about as follows:

"Aw, you haven't got any real father and mother."

"Maybe I haven't, but the ones I have got love me as much as yours do you."

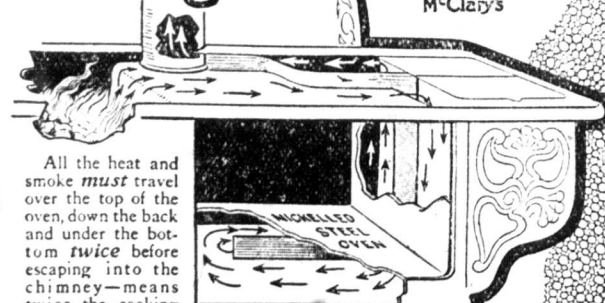

"They do not. Ours are our real par- ents."

"Well, mine love me more than yours do you, 'cause mine picked me out of a hundred other babies, and yours had to take what they got," replied the adopted son.—Life.

POINTS FOR DAIRYMEN.

The farsighted dairyman has provided himself with a series of soiling crops to be used during the dry season, when pastures will inevitably be short.

There is no prospect of overstocking the dairy cow market.

Dairy farming is the best soil fertility insurance.

The dairy farmer is often judged by the amount of clover or alfalfa that he raises and his attitude toward these two crops.

Comfort for the cow has a tendency to increase the milk flow.

It is better to salt the cows every day. Two to three ounces to each cow is enough.

where near the stable. Allow the horse ample time in which slowly and perfectly to masticate his feed at noon. Bolted feed does little good. It is not properly wetted with saliva and is not perfectly digested. Sunstroke and heat exhaustion kill the horse that is suffering from indigestion in hot weather. Care, such as we are suggesting here, tends to prevent indigestion and incidentally prevents sunstroke.

Do not forget the daily cleansing of the skin. Wash soiled parts. This is beneficial in hot weather, but remember to dry the parts washed. Groom the skin perfectly. Keep the currycomb off the animal's legs below the knees and hocks. The currycomb should be used mainly to clean the brush, not to scratch the skin.

IN THE HORSE BARN.

Don't forget—water, hay, water again, then grain.

If a horse is tired give him some hay to nibble on for an hour or so. Grain should never be given to a weary horse. Let him rest first.

Salt should always be kept before the horses. They will then eat just what is needed.

Horses should be frequently watered, but let the horse that is overheated have only a few swallows until he is cool.

Look out that your horses are not overcome with heat. Drive and work carefully.

Feed more oats and alfalfa and less corn now, as corn lacks sufficient muscle making protein for the working horse.

In stallion service fees a man generally gets just about what he pays for. Soundness should be the basis in selecting a draft stallion.

EDUCATING THE COLT.

Firm and Gentle Methods in Training Give Best Results.

By the time a colt is ready to wean he can be halter broken with very little trouble if you spend a few minutes each day petting and feeding him out of hand little things he likes, says J. E. Myer in the American Agriculturist. When you want to halter him go about it in an easy manner. Take the halter into the stable and let him touch it with his nose. As soon as he thinks it won't hurt him rub it gently about his head, letting him feel it when he seems to be in doubt. Do not try to hold him to put it on, but wait until he will allow you. Then put it on and take it off a few times, after which you can leave it on or put it on without any trouble.

When the colt is large enough to harness take the skeleton part of the harness and make him acquainted with it by letting him touch it with his nose. Then rub it down his neck and across his back till he doesn't mind it. Do not try to break him in one day. About twenty to thirty minutes a day is as long as you can keep his attention.

After he is used to the harness put an open bridle on him in place of the halter and have an easy bit, over few feet and allow him to stop and think about what he has done. Have a helper assist him to turn by pressing the shafts against him and back up by pulling the vehicle back. When he is afraid of anything talk to him gently and allow him to approach the object and touch it with his nose. If you lead him up to anything don't allow him to hurry when you are leaving it. Be firm, but gentle, with the colt and you will develop a horse that will repay you with good, honest work all his life.

THE FLOCKMASTER.

The time has come when every farmer who is in the sheep business should preserve a part of his corn crop in the silo. It means much in the efficient production of mutton.

Sheep cannot eat silage in as great proportionate quantity as do cattle, though no one seems to know why. However, they do well on it, and it saves a great deal of hay and other feed.

Sheep will do better on rough land than will any other kind of stock save goats.

Success in the sheep business depends as much or more upon the care taken as upon the sheep.

Oilmeal is greatly relished by lambs and helps greatly in obtaining a fine finish for the market.

Be sure the flock has plenty of fresh water. If the sheep drink from springs keep the approaches dry.

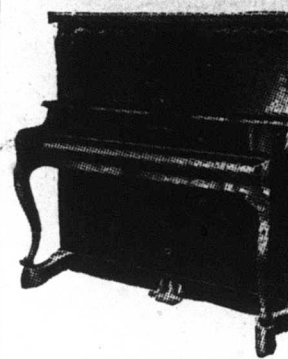

Corn silage is a safe feed for lambs when it is free from mold and does not contain an excessive amount of acid.

MILK COWS REGULARLY.

Carelessness in This Matter Tends to Lessen Milk Flow.

No greater mistake can be made with good dairy cows than to milk at irregular hours. No good cow will keep up her milk flow under such treatment, writes H. F. Burton in the Orange Judd Farmer. Two milkings a day, twelve hours apart, is the only rule which the cows will abide by. On my own farm we milk at 5 a. m. and 5 p. m., which are as convenient hours as any. If anything happens to delay the milking even an hour it is noticeable that the cows resent it by giving less milk for a day or two. The reason for this is not far to seek. The solids of the milk are secreted at a very uniform rate between milkings, but the liquid part is mostly formed just before and during milking.

If a cow giving six quarts of milk at a milking was killed half an hour before milking there would not be more than two quarts of milk in her udder. This addition of the liquid to the solids that have accumulated since the last milking constitutes a large part of "letting down the milk" and is under the control of her nervous system. I do not mean that it is voluntary on the part of the cow, though I have seen men club a cow to make her let down the milk. We all know how emotion

LUNCHEON SETS.

Novelties in Summer Linens Bungalow.

Several attractive novelties in summer linens for the country line being shown now. Our old friend willow pattern, which has been standard a thing in china as butter are in food, has been used as an embroidery design for linens. Bungalow willow sets, as luncheon outfits are called, are then with the traditional Chib sign embroidered in two shades of blue. The price is $16.50 for a set consisting of a twenty-seven inch square and three dozen doily dozen in each of the three sizes. Small napkins to match dozen.

Willow china can be used with corresponding linen with still better effect. Too striking, in fact, a thing except country house or inn. Even there it will seem to women to be "too much of a thing" and they will prefer to plainer china with the willow.

Austrian linens are another thing. They come in white, a pale blue and a dull creamy yellow color is not sold, however, a

The announcement that the Shire Horse Society of England, desiring to encourage the owners and breeders of Shire horses in America, had resolved to offer ten gold challenge cups, valued at $50 each, has aroused much interest among American breeders. Two of these cups will be awarded annually to the representative American shows in rotation for five years. The society selected the International Live Stock exhibition at Chicago for its offer in 1911, and the gold cups will be awarded (a) for the best registered Shire stallion and (b) for the best registered Shire mare. Horses entered for these cups must be registered or eligible for registration in the American Shire stud book. After he is used to the harness put an open bridle on him in place of the halter and have an easy bit, over which do not allow him to get his tongue. Take him into a small inclosure if possible and teach him to guide. In doing this and until you hitch him up it is best to run the reins through the shaft carrier. Teach him to guide one way before trying the other. After he will guide easily both ways pull him first one way, then the other. His mouth is very tender, so do not be rough with him.

Now you are ready to teach him the command "Whoa!" Start him with a little pull or a touch and stop him by a seesaw pull, saying "Whoa!" at the same time. Stop him at the same place for a few times till he stops of his own accord; then make him go on and stop anywhere you want to. Reduce your pull on the lines till he stops at the command. When ready to teach "Get up" let him stop; then pull very lightly on one line; touch him with a whip and say "Get up," all at the very same time. Repeat till he starts and stops at either command.

He will now be ready to hitch up. Put the harness on and drill him two or three minutes as before, then hitch him to something light if possible, let him know that he is attached to a rig, shake the shafts against him gently and rattle the wheels, have an assistant help him start the vehicle, go a

I do not mean that it is voluntary on the part of the cow, though I have seen men club a cow to make her let down the milk. We all know how emotion such as anxiety or fright, makes one months dry. It is just in this way that any sort of disturbance shuts off a cow's milk.

I have several times found men who failed to milk their cows clean thus drying them up after six or seven months. The best security against this is found in keeping daily milk records. A spring balance with a dial face and a ruled sheet of cardboard will pay many hundred per cent in the larger flow of milk. I know that many a man who is dishonest enough to leave milk in a cow's udder is not bold enough to put record of his dishonesty down for his employer to read.

HOG CHOLERA CHECKED.

Methods by Which a Community Stamped Out Disease.

George Glover of the Utah experiment station writes that in one community with which he is familiar and in which hog cholera was rampant the disease was stamped out by the following method:

A competent veterinarian was made a deputy sheriff with instruction to clean up cholera. He did it by first ordering the carcasses of cholera hogs destroyed by fire. Healthy hogs were isolated from sick ones, serum was used with discretion, pens were or doped cleaned once a week and the litter destroyed by fire, lime was scattered in the yards and the pens white-washed, the hogs were placed in quarantine, and notices to that effect were posted conspicuously, the moving of hogs on the public roads was prohibited, and all imported hogs were held fifteen days before exposing them to other hogs.

This procedure in a general way, if enforced vigorously, will control hog cholera, and there is no other way. The sanitary authorities must enforce the same general rules in quarantine and disinfection that they do with smallpox and scarlet fever in the human, and there is no reason why the disease cannot be equally well controlled.

Taking Calf From Its Mother.

The exact time will depend upon the condition of the calf and its mother at time of calving. If the calf is strong and in good condition it may be taken away immediately, without allowing it to nurse. If the calf is weak at birth or if the cow's udder is inflamed or caked it is probably a better practice to allow it to remain with its mother for several days. In case the calf is immediately taken away from its mother it should receive the mother's first milk by all means, as it acts as a laxative and tonic and is very effective in cleaning out the digestive tract and stimulating the digestive organs.—American Agriculturist.

BOWSER'S SOAP.

He Had Helped His Mother Make It Many a Time.

INGREDIENTS ALL RIGHT.

Yet For All That the Soap Seemed Slow In Reaching Perfection—Failure of Experiment Blamed on Mrs. B.'s Lack of Enthusiasm.

By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, 1913, by Associated Literary Press.]

IT was the Bowsers' third Sunday at the Green farm. He had mowed, and he had plowed, and he sat looking out of the back door and wondering what else he could tackle to regain his health.

"Are you lonesome?" asked Mrs. Bowser after she had watched for awhile.

"Not a bit of it," was the reply. "I think I have added ten pounds to my weight in two weeks."

"Perhaps you do look better."

"Perhaps? There's no perhaps about it. I could bite nails."

"I told you the last thing before we left home to get a bar of kitchen soap and bring it along. Did you forget it?"

"Yes, by thunder, but it has reminded me of something else. I'm mighty glad you spoke of it. You shall have soap in plenty in the morning."

"But it's five miles to the nearest grocery."

"We don't want any grocery. I am going to make a batch of old fashioned country soft soap."

"But you can't."

"But I can and will."

"How?"

"We have had our experiences with plowing and mowing. To finish out the romance we ought to make soft soap. Every farmer makes his own soap, you know."

"But you know how soft soap is made, don't you?" she queried.

"Very likely. I've helped mother to make millions of barrels of it. In fact, the day you were born I was making look and to say:

"I don't believe you will make soap out of that stuff."

Bowser's Brew Stays Soft.

"What you don't believe would fill a big book," sulkily answered Mr. Bowser. "I think it needs salt."

"Who ever heard of salt in soft soap?"

"I have, and I'm going to put some in. We always use salt to solidify it."

Mr. Bowser got a bowl of salt and threw it in, but the only effect was to make more foam. He went back to the house for more, but changed his mind and brought out a box of ginger, a cup of white sugar and a package of corn-starch and chucked them in one after another.

"That will be a curious brand of soap," said Mrs. Bowser as she watched the proceedings.

Mr. Bowser turned on her and pointed to the doorsteps. He had got his mind up and was dangerous. She retired, and he brought another pail of water and increased the fire. He suddenly remembered reading that old boots were good things in making soft soap, and, having noticed a barrel of them in the woodshed, he went after and brought out three pairs and dropped them into the kettle. When the contents had been boiling for an hour Mrs. Bowser suggested that it was bedtime and that he had all the next day to experiment in, but he drew himself up stiffly and replied:

"If it's bedtime, then go to bed. I set out to make soft soap, and I'll make it if I have to stay awake two weeks!"

When she had gone in he bethought him that his mother used to use a sassafras stick in stirring the contents of the soap kettle. He didn't know sassafras from rosewood; but, taking another trip to the kitchen and pantry, he carried out a bath brick, a box of stove polish, a loaf of bread and three nutmegs, and these things went into the kettle to keep the old boots company.

No Soap In Sight.

Ten minutes later he added a dozen potatoes, and a little later he chucked in an old straw hat from the stock in the woodshed. He was no nearer soap than when the fire was first lighted, and as he realized this he flung an old paint keg in on top of all and muttered to himself:

"By the beard of my father, but I'll have soap or death! If she doesn't come in fifteen minutes more!"

She didn't. The smell had got to be like the odors of three glue factories condensed and put up in original packages, and Mr. Bowser had worked faithfully for three long hours in smoke and heat. All of a sudden he reached in and kicked the kettle off the fire and overturned it, and then, seizing an ax, he hammered away until the vessel was in fragments. Ten minutes later his coming to bed awakened Mrs. Bowser, who sleepily queried:

"Well, how's your soap?"

"Not a word, woman—not a word!" hoarsely replied Mr. Bowser.

"But what's the matter?"

"Never you mind; I understand what has happened, and tomorrow morning we'll have a talk and settle matters. Long ago I warned you that you were driving me to the dead line. The line has been reached at last, and it only remains to arrange the parting—the parting, Mrs. Bowser! Not a word, not a flap—up excuses! You were determined that I shouldn't make soft

"But you know how soft soap is made, don't you?" she queried.

"Very likely. I've helped mother to make millions of barrels of it. In fact, the day you were born I was making soft soap."

Certain Ingredients Necessary.

"You must have soap grease," she suggested.

"Not necessarily."

"And lye. We should have to have a leech to get our lye, and I haven't saved any soap grease."

"That's the old way," said Mr. Bowser. "Here in this box is all we want to make soap with. I got the stuff at a hardware store. You fill your kettle with water, put in the ingredients and start the fire, and when the soap is made you send chunks of it around to your friends, tied with fancy ribbons."

"Perhaps it will work," she said, in doubtful tones.

"It's got to work. The man warrant- ed it to make soap in one hour. There's an old kettle down in the barn, and I'll get it up and start a fire."

"Just—just what object would it be to make soft soap?" asked Mrs. Bowser as got up.

"What object? What's the object of living? You talk mighty queer for a woman who is sent out in the country for the benefit of her health. In the first place, it will remind us of a gypsy campfire and weave a sort of halo about our position. In the second place, we want soft soap for family use and to grease the tools and cow's heels with."

"I never heard of soft soap for a cow's heels."

"Didn't you? There's lots of things in this cold and cruel world you've never heard of. Before I was ten years old I had learned that soft soap- ing a cow's feet helped her to increase her gift by 50 per cent. You rake some chips together and I'll bring up the kettle."

Mrs. Bowser Objects.

"But there's no cow here, and we haven't got one at home," she protested.

"But we may have some day."

"You'll have no luck with your soap, and then you'll blame me."

"I'll make a batch of soap almost good enough to eat, and there will be no reason to blame anybody. We are out here for the romance of the thing as well as for our health. Don't be a mule about things."

Mrs. Bowser wasn't at all enthusias- tic, knowing that consequences were sure to follow, but she helped to hoist the kettle up on some stones and start a fire. Mr. Bowser brought the water from the well, shook in his ingredients, and presently the twilight fell, and his gypsy campfire was lighting up the back yard like a beacon.

"Now, this is what I call romantic!" exclaimed Mr. Bowser as he sat down on the ground near the fire and looked around with a smile. "Mrs. Bowser, think of the hot and crowded city, the bricks and cobblestones, the sufferings of the people who can't get away!"

Mrs. Bowser withdrew, and for an hour Mr. Bowser attended the fire in the most faithful manner. The man had warranted soap in sixty minutes, but at the end of that time the stuff in the kettle was foaming away as at first. Mrs. Bowser strolled around to have a look at the fire. "What has happened, and tomorrow morning we'll have a talk and settle matters. Long ago I warned you that you were driving me to the dead line. The line has been reached at last, and it only remains to arrange the parting—the parting, Mrs. Bowser! Not a word, not a flisp-up excuses! You were de- termined that I shouldn't make soft soap, and to baffle me you willfully and maliciously!"

But Mrs. Bowser was asleep and snoring as she slumbered.

For Those Who Entertain.

What has been served at company luncheons and dinners is so soon for- gotten by the hostess that she may un- consciously repeat her bill of fare for some of the same guests. To avoid do- ing this a young matron in a fast grow- ing suburb, where the young married folk entertain one another a good deal, keeps a book which is proving of great value to her.

In it she records the names of the guests invited to a luncheon, tea or dinner, and on the same page the bill of fare for the meal, with a memoran- dum about the decorations for the table. Her book not only prevents her from repeating the same bill of fare for the same persons, but also offers her many suggestions of seasonable dishes.

New Recipes.

A cooling dessert is Lalla Roohk, which is nothing more than a sherbet glass filled with any kind of water ice that has a large spoonful scooped from the center, which is filled just before serving with creme de menthe cordial, brandy or rum. Pineapple or orange ice is especially good with this com- bination.

BOY SALUTING THE KAISER.

everyday occurrence, and it is there- fore not surprising that the German lit- tle folks, especially the boys, should become imbued with the military spirit. When the kaiser turns out at a review of troops there is always a large crowd to cheer him and his gallantly attired soldiers. At the recent Potsdam re- view the camera man snapped a couple of boys perched on a window ledge just as they were saluting the kaiser in true military fashion. One is in the uni- form of a naval officer and the other in the gorgeous uniform of the royal hussars.

For Fancy Work.

A new notion in painting or in fancy work, as you will, comes from Eng- land. It is called "pen painting" be- cause of the process involved. By this process a special kind of oil paint is applied to fabrics, and on gowns pro- duces an entirely different effect from the hitherto seen stencil work.

On fans, particularly of gauze, the result is very pretty. This seems the best of the suggestions given for it, though picture frames and book cov- ers are done by the same method. Book covers of satin might be successfully decorated in this way for special oc- casions; that is, presentation books, books for the bride, etc.

In applying the paint a pen point is used to pick up the small, previously divided particles of prepared paint and to place them on the satin. A com- plete outfit for the work costs $3.50, the colors are $2 a dozen, and the necessary ingredients for mixing are $3 a dozen each. Patterns for the work are also to be had if one is not clever at drawing one's own.

Lennox and Addington Teachers' Institute meets at Napanee Thursday and Friday, October 2nd and 3rd.

Last week in our report of the Lennox fall show we failed to make mention of the unique exhibit by M. B. Mills, in a tent of his own manufacture, a collection of poultry appliances, incubators, brooders, etc., and poultry foods of Cyphers make, also a yard of very fine Rhode Island pullets from his prize strain. The latter attracted a great deal of attention on account of the uniformity and richness of their color.

A pretty wedding took place on Tuesday, September 16th, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Burley, Bath, when their daughter Grace Elizabeth, was united in marriage to Faber Covert, of this village. The ceremony which took place at 8 p.m., was performed by Rev. A. L. McTear. The bride who was given away by her father, was becomingly dressed in a tailored suit. The happy pair and their friends sat down to a dainty lunch which was becomingly graced by speeches and toasts. The bridal pair then left for Napanee where they caught the midnight train for the west. The many and valuable presents attested to the popularity of the young couple in the village.

As announced early in the season, the Dominion Live Stock Branch has this year undertaken a distribution of pure bred male animals throughout Canada on a somewhat extensive scale. In inaugurating this policy the aim has been to aid sections where pure sires were lacking and to encourage new communities in following an intelligent system in breeding. This form of assistance has proven very popular and during the past few months a large number of bulls and several stallions have been placed in various parts of the country in the hands of local associations formed specially for the purpose of handling and maintaining them. All animals placed remain the property of the Department of Agriculture, the local associations assuming the responsibility for the maintenance and management under the general supervision of the Dominion Live Stock Branch.

On Wednesday evening fired Ira Thompson's store, dwelling barn, John M. Hughes' store, dwelling and store house, P. Hart's black shop and barn, and Mrs. McFarlane's house. The fire started in the Mr. Hughes' store and as the fire without fire protection the buildings burned caught fire on another and all was completely destroyed. Some furniture was from the dwellings but little from stores.

Sept. 30th—"The Rosary."

"The Rosary," as presented by Rowland and Clifford, is repeating with as much success as the play had in its debut. It will be seen at the Napanee Opera House, Sept. 30th, with a cast including Walter Allen, Wallace Scott, Mabel Haven, Donna Lee, Sallie Clute, Edgar Murray, Sydney Platt, Billie Champ and Herman Gaa. The theme of the play concerns a man and a woman happily married. They are surrounded with every luxury of wealth and happiness. But the husband is an unbeliever, an atheist, without faith of any kind. There is a jarring note in the household harmony. No one notices it until a friend of the husband comes, Father Brian Kelly, a priest of the modern world, with a deep insight into human nature, and a divine love for his fellowman. And when trouble comes, when the home is wrecked, and the husband and wife are brought down to the depths of suffering agony, it is the priest who restores both into the sunlight of hope and love. Plan now open at the Box Office, Opera House. Prices 25, 35, 50, 75, $1.00.

Church Re-Opening.

Colebrooke Methodist Church which has been undergoing repairs for the past three months was re-opened on Sunday, Sept. 21st, 1913. The building committee, composed of Messrs.
Norman Boyce, Edward Purcell, George Curl, and Charles Lee were appointed to see that the interior was entirely overhauled. This was accomplished by re-papering, painting and varnishing. Alterations were made in the gallery and winlows, the pulpit
was rebuilt and a new chancel rail added and new oak seats were placed in the main body of the church. The Ladies' Aid, after giving one hundred dollars toward the general repairs,
very generously gave a fine new Karn-Norris organ as their share of the improvements. This is one of the most powerful reed organs made in Canada.
It possesses a very sweet tone and gave general satisfaction on Sunday, resembling very much a pipe organ in quality of tone and appearance. In all over one thousand dollars was expended in improving the little stone edifice. Despite the steady downpour of rain the attendance was fairly good at both services and very liberal collections were given. The choir, under the leadership of the organist, Miss Georgie Warner, gave special music.
Morning Anthem—"Day of Rest and Gladness," J. A Parks.
Offertory—"Abide with me," Pierce.
Evening Anthem—"We praise Thee
O God," arr. from Rossini.
Quartet—"There's a beautiful country," Parks.

Anthem—"Just as I am," J. A.
Parks.

Rev. Nickle, from the Bay circuit, won many friends by his able and eloquent sermons at the morning and evening services. He was assisted by the pastor of this church, Rev. W. D.
P. Wilson. This was followed by a grand old fashioned tea-meeting on Monday evening. Supper was served in the Orange Hall, from six to eight,
where there was an abundance of everything good to eat. After supper excellent addresses and a short musical programme was given in the church. Rev. Nickle, of Napanee, took "Culture" as the subject of his excellent address. Rev. White, Wilton, took as his subject, "Wanted, a man," and gave a very scholarly talk on this interesting subject. W. J.
Paul, M.P., of Tamworth, made an excellent chairman and pleased all with his short and entertaining address. The musical part of the programme was given by our Yarker
friends who gave several quartets
and solos of good merit. Rev.
W. D. P. Wilson looked after the finances, and a generous subscription was taken up which
with the former subscription entirely cleared the debt on the church, which is now one of the neatest little churches in the country. The Ladies' Aid will hold a bazaar and grand con-concert in early November to finish paying for the organ.
